

MILLIONAIRE BALDWIN'S SON DRAGGED TO DEATH

CREMATING HUNDREDS OF JEWS ALIVE

Liquor-Mad Cossacks in Carnival of Robbery and Massacre.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 16, 11 p.m.—The latest advices received here from Bialystok, Vitna, Bresth-Litovsk, Chornowicz and Grodado, where anti-Jewish riots are in progress, indicate that the disturbances, instead of becoming more quiet, are increasing, and that in most instances the authorities are either unable or do not desire to quell the trouble. In fact, it now seems certain that, so far as the local authorities are concerned, the Jews have little to expect at their hands.

HORRIBLE STORIES.

Survivors from Bialystok tell horrible stories of their experiences there and the latest advices from that place indicate that there is hardly a Jewish house left unharmed. More than one-quarter of the Jewish section is in flames, and in many instances the residents have been killed in their homes which have been burned and their bodies incinerated.

"IS A REHEARSAL."

BERLIN, June 16—"We have reason to believe that the massacre of Jews at Bialystok is a rehearsal for a wholesale repetition of the atrocities at Odessa, which convulsed the civilized world last October," said Dr. Paul Nathan, president of the Central Jewish relief league of Germany, today. The league has received telegrams sent from Bialystok at five o'clock this morning, declaring that the carnival of murders, robbery and rapine was still in full blast, despite the Russian government's usual assurances that prompt measures had been taken for suppressing the disorder.

"OFFICIALLY INSPIRED."

"Our information," continued Dr. Nathan, "indicates that the Bialystok massacre is the same sort of officially inspired counter revolutionary outbreak as was that at Odessa. We have learned positively that the government's allegation that the trouble began in consequence of bombs being thrown at a Christian religious procession by Jews is a ridiculous falsehood. Bialystok is still in the hands of the drunken Cossacks, who have surrounded the town with the apparent determination that no Jews shall be allowed to escape alive or unrobbed."

"The military have destroyed the railroad station, and every passing train is held up and the passengers plundered. Panic reigns in the bordering villages which undoubtedly will be the next object of attack. The German firms as individuals are among the suffering at Bialystok and the suggestion has been made that the intervention of the Kaiser's government ought to be invoked."

COREY TO PAY $3,000,000 FOR A CHANCE TO MARRY

NEW YORK, June 16—When the report was received from Pittsburg that William Ellis Corey, president of the steel trust intends to marry a society woman if his wife gets her divorce the question was raised among his friends: "What will Maybelle Gilman?"

Those who know Miss Gilman declare she is strong-willed and so used to having her own way that she cannot be imposed upon easily. A bomb is expected to explode when the actress hears of Corey's ante-divorce agreement.

Under the terms of agreement between Corey and Mrs. Corey, he placed in escrow $3,000,000 to be paid to his wife when the divorce should be granted. He also agreed that she was to have the custody of their only child,

DECLINES TO JOIN COMBINE TO FORCE BIG CUT IN CLAIMS

Another Company Won't Sanction Discounts, While Refusal to Pay in Full Is Declared to Be Illegal.

NEWARK, N. J., June 16.—Philemon L. Hoadley, vice-president of the American Insurance Company of this city, denied today that there was any truth in the statement that the company would pay only 75 per cent of its losses in the San Francisco disaster. He has sent this telegram to S. K. Hatfield, the American's adjuster in San Francisco:

"Decline to co-operate with companies which are demanding discount of legitimate claims. Straight fire losses, if total, should be paid in full without discount or compromise."

Hatfield says: "The American will pay its losses in full, 100 cents on the dollar, without cavil or contest of any kind. It will not make any difference whether the property was destroyed by fire or by the earthquake, except that the losses by earthquake must be compromised."

NEW YORK, June 16—Well-known fire insurance men in this city said yesterday that in their judgment the flat cut of 25 per cent from the face value of San Francisco policies by some of the companies was not only unwise but would not be upheld by the courts. Henry E. Evans, president of the Continental Company, said

"The companies should pay the full value or the losses covered by the policies. Those who do not will be looked upon as 'welchers.' If the insurance commissioners of the state were doing their duty they could stop it. They could either make them pay up or stop doing business."

E. H. A. Cerrea, vice-president of the Home Company, said

UNKNOWN MAN IS KILLED; IS IT ACCIDENT OR SUICIDE?

The 7:20 train from Fourteenth and Franklin street's going to San Francisco, killed an unknown man at First street last evening. He was a man apparently about 60 years of age, inclined somewhat to baldness with a gray mustache. He went under the gates which had already been shut down by L. A. Steele, one of the townsmen, regardless of the warnings shouted to him by several men, and they are under the impression that he was either drunk or deaf. He had almost cleared the track when the engine struck him. His right leg was cut off at the knee and he was otherwise injured. He was removed to the receiving hospital by Policeman A. B. Smith and Dr. O. D. Hamlin did what he could for the patient, but the loss of blood and shock to the system was too much for him and he succumbed to his injuries a few hours later.

In the pocket of his coat was the tailor's record which showed that it had been made for B. Jaquier but it is believed that the deceased must have come into possession of it second hand for he did not have the appearance of

MAY APPEAL TO THE UNITED POWERS

BERLIN, June 16.—A number of influential Jews in Germany are at present considering the advisability of an appeal to the powers to have the Jewish question treated on the basis of an international agreement along the lines dealt with in Crete and Macedonia.

It is stated that as a result of a meeting held this evening it was practically decided to name a distinguished deputation of Jews from Berlin, Paris and London to visit the governments of France, England, Austria, America, Italy and Germany and urge concord action along these lines.

It is suggested that this committee be made as influential as possible and that there be included in its ranks all of the leading Jewish financiers, as it is argued that all governments would hesitate a good while before they would refuse to hear a delegation of men from which they might later be compelled to seek financial favors.

MOTHER IS ON VERGE OF LOSING MIND

Accident Occurs at a Resort Near the Colorado Springs.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., July 16.—John Tolsee Baldwin, the eight-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Baldwin, millionaire residents of Broadmoor, late of San Francisco, a suburb of this city was dragged to death at noon today by a runaway burro in North Cheyenne canyon. His younger brother, Theo B. Baldwin, age six years, was also in the party and was saved from a similar fate by L. G. Gelzer of the Marshall Field stores of Chicago who was in the canyon at the time. He dragged the boy from the back of the runaway burro in time to save his life.

The two Baldwin boys and their governess had gone up the canyon on burros for an outing. A drove of loose burros came up behind in a wild stampede, frightening the animals which the boys were riding. The Baldwins formerly resided in San Francisco where Mr. Baldwin lost $2,000,000 in property on account of the recent earthquake and fire.

MAY LOSE MIND.

The shock of her son's death has prostrated Mrs. Baldwin, who, it is feared, may lose her mind as a result.

The two boys and their governess had gone up the canyon when a drove of loose burros in a wild stampede came down the hill toward them. The three animals that they were riding took fright also and stampeded with the others. At almost the first sound John Baldwin was thrown from his seat, his head striking against a boulder.

One foot slipped through the wide stirrup, and he was dragged several hundred yards, until the burro finally came to a standstill. The body was placed in a tourist carriage and, accompanied by the governess and the other brother, driven to the Baldwin residence.

ARE PROSTRATED.

Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin are prostrated as a result of the terrible accident, and Mrs. Baldwin is still in the care of her physician, who was hastily summoned. Her condition is regarded as serious.

The funeral arrangements have been made and services will be held at the family residence Monday morning at 11 o'clock. The Rev. Arthur Taft officiating. Temporary interment will be in a vault in Evergreen cemetery, and later the body will be taken to San Francisco, the former home of the Baldwins.

IS THE THIRD.

Today's accident is the third of a series of misfortunes that seem to be pursuing the Baldwin family. During the earthquake and fire in San Francisco in April the Baldwins suffered losses that are placed at $2,000,000. Included in the property destroyed were the famous old Baldwin home on Van Ness avenue that contained priceless heirlooms, and the Baldwin country estate at Santa Clara, known as "Beaulea," modeled after architecture of Louis XVI period. The estate was one of the finest in the United States.

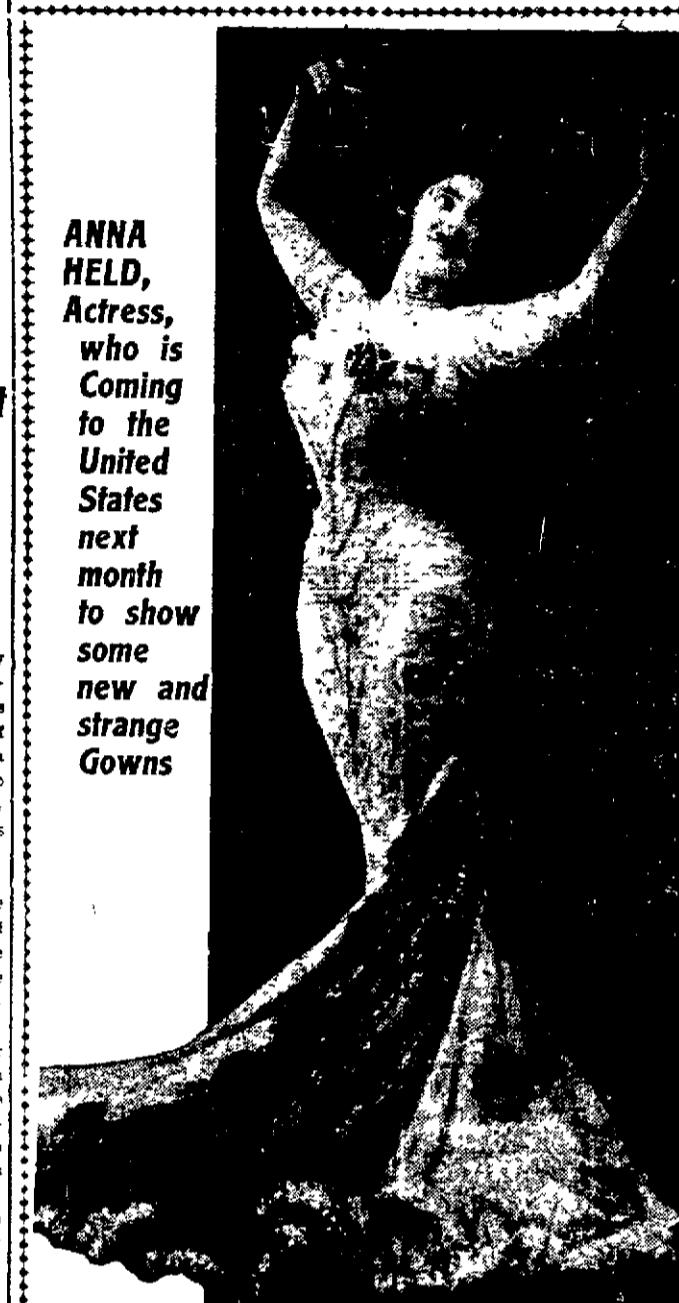

Some time ago during the building of an immense stable at the Baldwin country home at Broadmoor a workman fell from the scaffold and was so badly injured that his death was expected. He later recovered.

ANNA HELD DANCES ON DIAMOND HEELS

ANNA HELD, Actress, who is Coming to the United States next month to show some new and strange Gowns

Actress Is Coming to United States Next Month with Pretty Costumes and Still Prettier Dresses.

PARIS, June 16.—Anna Held, starting and she has a forty weeks' engagement ahead of her at Daly's. The dresses throughout are to be superb and will be the delight of American women.

They will be modeled on all the most striking styles during the past 100 years and the effect cannot help but be telling.

There are to be some songs too, that will be fetching—French songs with a little spice in them and lots of life. Altogether the actress is planning to outdo anything she has ever done in the theatrical line and it is predicted that she will succeed.

SISTER SAYS COUNTESS MUST NEVER REMARRY

PARIS, June 16.—Miss Helen Miller Gould is staying here as the guest of her sister, the Countess de Castellane. Friends say that Miss Gould has declared to the Countess that she will sanction the divorce proceeding, only upon the condition that the countess makes a formal pledge that she will never remarry.

Although the legal period allowed for a reconciliation expired a fortnight ago, the Countess Anna has not served her divorce papers upon the count.

George J. Gould, it is stated, is also opposed to the divorce on account of the countess' children.

Under the French law Count Boni

TONS OF FOOD ARE DESTROYED DAILY

LONDON, June 16.—The report of Dr. Thomas, the medical officer of the borough of Stepney, to the local government board, shows that his department during the last five years has destroyed over a ton of rotten, tinned food daily at the Stepney wharves.

These, he adds, were not American odds as no canned goods from American firms are imported through the Stepney wharves, but were colonial meat, fish and fruit.

'POP' PRIEST IS DYING AT HIS HOME

Veteran Traveling Man Can Last But a Few Hours.

Daniel H. Priest, one of the best known and most popular members of Oakland Lodge of Elks, who for many years was one of the best known traveling men on the Pacific Coast, lies at the point of death at his home at 384 Myrtle street, and his physicians say that the end can be deferred but a few hours at the most. He has been ill for some time past but the end has been hastened by the bursting of a small blood vessel in the brain, which renders recovery impossible.

PROMINENT ELK.

"Pop" Priest, as he was best known among the members of the local lodge of Elks, has been a resident of California for more than fourteen years, during the greater part of which time he was engaged as a traveling salesman covering territory from Seattle, Washington to San Diego, and as far east as Denver, Colorado. During the time that he was engaged in this business he won a host of warm friends, and the news of his death will bring sorrow to many who have learned to love him for his many acts of kindness and charity for he was ever ready to relieve distress wherever found.

FATHER OF LODGE.

Mr. Priest is the father of Mrs. Beatrice Priest-Fine, one of the best known vocalists of California, who some time ago went to New York where she has won an enviable reputation as a soloist and concert singer. His wife Mrs. Hannah E. Priest, and a son, B. Frank Priest, reside in this city, and are at the bedside of the dying man. The son is now engaged in the same business as was his father, that of a commercial traveler.

During the last few years Mr. Priest has been the manager of the cigar and tobacco department of Osgood's drug store and since he left "the road" he has been very active in the work of Oakland Lodge of Elks. He was a bosom friend of the late "Pop" Feeley, also one of the older members of the lodge, and the two were always referred to as the "fathers" of Oakland Lodge.

Mr. Priest is a veteran of the Civil war, having been a member of the St. Paul Minnesota company, which suffered the heaviest loss of any company which fought under the Stars and Stripes. Out of the one hundred and ten men who marched away from St. Paul to join in fighting for the union, but six returned, and one of these was "Pop" Priest.

PHYSICIAN AND MOTHER NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH

The animal started to run, both would have been dragged to death in the overturned buggy. The horse struggled madly to break from the hold of the officer, but the latter kept his grip on the bridle and finally subdued the frightened animal.

After securing the name of the driver of the wagon which had caused the accident, the police officer called on the driver of a passing automobile, and placing the doctor and his mother in the car sent them to their home at 120 Harrison street. Dr. Stone was uninjured except for a few minor bruises, but his mother sustained a painfully wrenched ankle and a number of severe contusions about the body.

MET IN HILLS, LOVED, AND WILL MARRY SOON

MISS EVELYN RATCLIFF.
Interesting Romance of 'Varsity Girl and Professor of Theological Seminary.

BERKELEY, June 16.—One of the most brilliant social events of the year will be the wedding of Miss Evelyn Maria Anna Ratcliff of Berkeley to Dr. William Frederic Bade, head of the Semitic department of the Pacific Theological seminary of the Pacific coast.

Miss Ratcliff is the youngest daughter of Rev. Walter H. Ratcliff, a prominent minister of San Francisco. She graduated from the University of California with the class of 1901. Because of the brilliant record she achieved throughout her college years she was made an honorary member of the Phi Beta Kappa society. She is also associated with the Delta Delta Delta fraternity, and is secretary of the Art association of the University of California.

Miss Ratcliff is a distinguished member of the Sierra Club of California, and was one of the first women to climb the high and rocky Sierras, the year before last, with Joaquin Miller and many other celebrated men who were invited to go on these men and it was there that Miss Ratcliff met him for the first time. ## POLICE KEPT BUSY ARRESTING DRUNKS

As is usual on Saturday night, the number of arrests for drunkenness was largely increased last night and yesterday afternoon, thirty-five arrests being made after the close of the police courts yesterday morning. It is peculiarly noticeable that after the saloons close at 7 p. m. there is, for about two hours, a marked decrease in the number of intoxicated persons seen on the streets and in the number of arrests, but as midnight approaches drunken men suddenly appear in large numbers, and from that time until the early hours of the morning the police are kept busy.

FIRM IN MESSES OF LAW

Employment Agents Ac- cused of Charging Seamen For Work

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—In its efforts to secure men to fill the places of the sailors, firemen and waiters who refused to work on steam schooners unless paid an increase in wages, the firm of Murray & Ready had complained filed against it for alleged violation of regulations regarding the employment of seamen. Andrew Furuseth, the secretary of the sailors' union, declares that he has sufficient proof in his possession to convict the members of the firm.

Yesterday H. G. Lundberg, Joseph Fernandez and Fred Wallace appeared in the federal court and swore to a complaint against the employment bureau for violating section 460 of the revised statutes as amended by the fifty-eighth congress, and which provides that anyone who demands or receives from any seaman or anyone seeking employment as a seaman a remuneration for furnishing him with employment shall be guilty of misdemeanor. The penalty for this crime is a fine not exceeding $500 or imprisonment not exceeding six months or both, at the discretion of the court.

The complaint reads that Lundberg, Wallace and Fernandez applied at Murray & Ready's in answer to an advertisement for seamen, and after having to pay a fee of $1 each they were given cards to the vessel. Andrew Furuseth laid the matter before the United States district attorney with the result that the complaint was filed yesterday in the federal court.

EACH BLAMES HIS ACCUSER

Landlord and Tenant Quarrel and Each Has the Other Arrested.

Because, as he alleges, he was romping with his sister after his return from work, Henry De Leon, a former student at the Lowell High school of San Francisco, was arrested last night at 768 Ninth street on a charge of disturbing the peace of W. B. Wilson, who is well-known in this city as a rescue worker at the city prison, and in turn caused the arrest of Wilson on a similar charge. De Leon declares that Wilson forced his way into the room occupied by himself and his sister, and when ordered out of the room caused the arrest of the youth on a charge of peace disturbance.

Wilson, on the other hand, alleges that De Leon and his sister were disturbing everyone in the house, and that when he remonstrated with them the youth violently ordered him to get out of the room or he would be thrown out. He says that so great was the disturbance raised that the plaster of the room beneath that occupied by De Leon and his sister was jarred from the ceiling.

Miss Minnie De Leon, the sister of the young man who was arrested tonight, is a graduate of Mills Seminary at Leona Heights, and is well known in this city and San Francisco, where she has a large circle of friends. With their grandfather and an uncle, M. De Leon, who is a commercial traveler, Henry De Leon and his sister formerly resided in San Francisco. They were driven from that city by the earthquake and their home was destroyed, and on their arrival in this city they secured rooms at 768 Ninth street, a rooming house of which Wilson is the proprietor.

M. De Leon, as soon as he heard that his nephew had been arrested, at once hurried to the police station and secured the release of the youth on bail. The former was very bitter against Wilson, whom he charges with having twice since they went to the house raised the rent of the room occupied by the brother and sister. He also declares that when his nephew and niece were securing provisions from the Oakland Relief Committee, Wilson, by representing that he had other refugees in the house, induced the young man to draw extra provisions, and turn them over to the landlord.

De Leon says that he has since learned that at no time were there any refugees except his nephew and niece in the house, and he directly charges Wilson with having secured the supplies for his own use.

ARRESTED FOR STREET FIGHTING

Ralph Pitts and James Cartier engaged in a wordy war last night at Broadway and Sixth street, and both becoming highly enraged, they started to settle the argument with their fists. About this time Police Officer McCready took a hand in the trouble, with the result that both the belligerents landed in the city prison on charges of disturbing the peace by fighting. When arrested the pair were both considerably the worse for their encounter.

BERKELEY GIRL TO WED OFFICER IN U. S. NAVY

Native Daughter of College Town to Have Quiet Ceremony in Parents' Home.

BERKELEY, June 16.—An engagement announcement of widespread interest in this city is that of Miss Cecilia King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. King, of Telegraph Avenue to Daniel J. Fowler, master-at-arms in the United States Navy.

The bride-to-be is a native daughter of Berkeley and enjoys a large circle of friends who await her wedding day with pleasure.

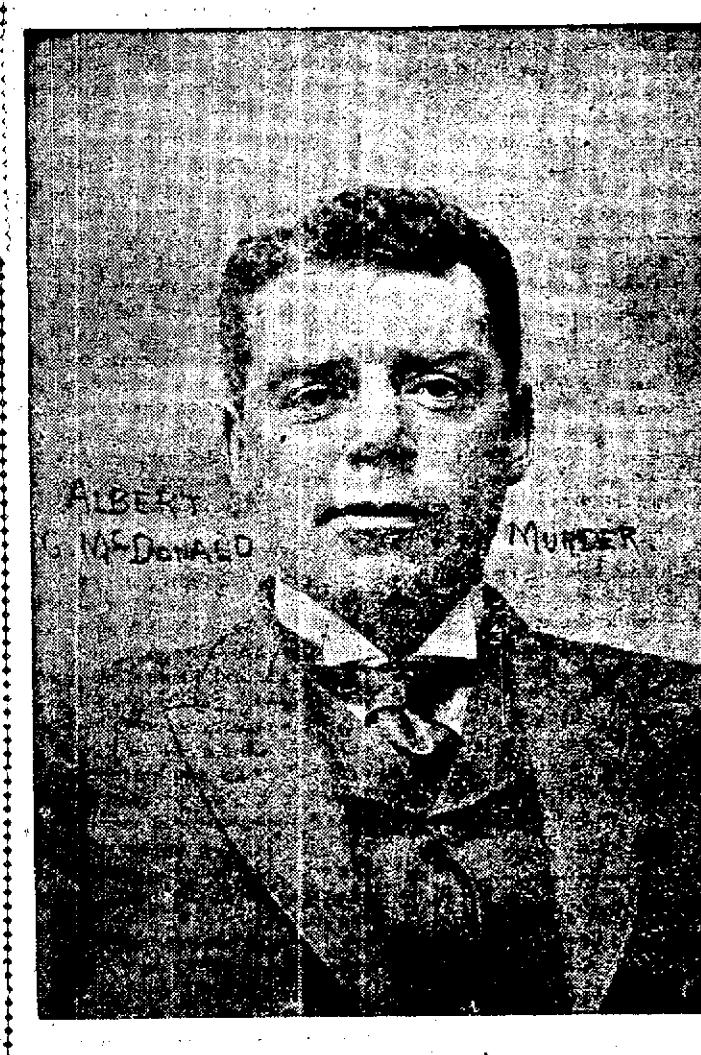

Miss King received her education in the local schools and was graduated from the Berkeley High, carrying off the high honors of the class of 1905.

The future groom is the son of William Fowler of Peru, Indiana.

The wedding was to have been an elaborate one, but this plan has been abandoned and the ceremony will be a home affair and will occur at the residence of the bride's parents, 2502 Dwight Way, Wednesday evening, June 27.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. E. L. Parsons. The bride's only attendant is to be her life-long friend, Miss Annie Spencer, and the groom will be supported by Joseph Ross of Hollister.

M'DONALD'S TRIAL TO BE RESUMED MONDAY

The trial of Al C. McDonald, charged with the murder of Joseph Mello at Pleasanton on March 22 last, will be resumed tomorrow morning. Several witnesses have been examined on behalf of the prosecution, which is being conducted by Deputy District Attorney Phil Walsh, but so far Mrs. McDonald, the woman over whom the shooting occurred, has not yet been called upon by Attorneys Tom Bradley, R. M. Fitzgerald and Asa Mendenhall, who are defending McDonald.

This is a matter that has yet to be considered. According to the story told by McDonald, it was a love scene told by him that he had witnessed between the man he shot and his wife. Just how much she consented to it or was a willing participant is not clear to us. The shooting took place a short time previously and she was in tears, and this is why McDonald says that he is willing to forgive her. He does not believe that she was altogether to blame for the shooting.

The clothing of the deceased, which was introduced in evidence, shows the bullet hole through the lapel of the coat just over the heart. It is badly powder-burned and shows that it was fired at close range. McDonald said behind the lounge the fact that Mello got close enough to him to powder-burned would indicate that McDonald is telling the truth about the shooting.

Thinking World Plots His Undoing, Man Be- comes Insane.

Laboring under the delusion that the possession of great wealth had caused the world to plot his undoing, Manuel Carvalho, a native of the Azores Islands, suddenly became violently insane at his home in East Oakland today, and his actions so terrified the members of his family that the police were notified and asked to place the maniac under arrest. Patrolman Woods was sent in the patrol wagon to take Carvalho into custody, and when he arrived at the house he found the man violently insane, and held down by four men.

REFUSED TO GO.

Carvalho at first refused to go with the police officer, and he looked as if the latter would have had a hard battle with the maniac on the way to the police station, but after some hesitation Carvalho suddenly changed his mind, and expressed his willingness to go without trouble. Woods took the insane man to the city prison, where he was booked on a charge of insanity. He was taken to the detention ward of the receiving hospital to be held pending examination by the lunacy commission. Carvalho is 32 years of age, and has been working as a laborer. He lives with his family on East Thirty-third street near Fourteenth avenue.

MAN OF MYSTERY TO APPEAR IN MURDER CASE

YOSEMITE VALLEY IS ACCEPTED

Sec'ty Hitchcock Wants Arrangements Made for Transfer.

SACRAMENTO, June 16.—Governor Pardee today received a telegram from Secretary Hitchcock of the interior department announcing that President Roosevelt has approved the resolution of congress accepting Yosemite valley and the Mariposa big tree grove.

The legislature, in its regular session in 1905, passed a bill, which Governor Pardee signed, authorizing him, in behalf of the state, to cede the two natural wonders to the federal government.

In his telegram, the governor secretary Hitchcock requested that the guardian of the valley, who is appointed by the Yosemite valley commissioners, be withdrawn at once so the federal government may enter without delay into full possession and management.

Governor Pardee will address a communication to the commissioners setting forth Secretary Hitchcock's request and it is probable it will be granted.

WATSONVILLE IS SELECTED

Is to Be Meeting Place Next Year of the Native Daughters.

SALINAS, June 16.—After a session lasting until nearly 3:30 this morning the grand parlor of Native Daughters finished the election of officers. The three remaining grand trustees were chosen as follows: Anna F. Lucy, Los Gatos; Margaret Hansen, Visalia; Ella Flaherty, Napa.

The report from the committee on transportation which was appointed to confer with the passenger agent of the Southern Pacific Company in the matter of lower rates to Los Angeles made an unfavorable report. Much discussion resulted, but after a vote Watsonville won out as next year's meeting place. The sessions will be held in July.

TOBACCO MAGNATES ESCAPE PUNISHMENT

NEW YORK, June 16.—Judge LaCombe in the United States court today denied the motion of the federal government to punish for contempt William H. Ransom, secretary of the McAndrews & Forbes Company; John S. Young of the J. S. Young Company, and W. H. McAllister of the American Tobacco Company. The contempt proceedings grew out of the failure of the officers to produce letters and papers before the United States grand jury which has been conducting an investigation into the so-called tobacco trust.

The motion was dismissed on the ground that the men were served as individuals and not as officers of the corporations.

RODNEY, Russia, June 16.—According to messages received here late today the king continues at Bialystok. The government of Germany and the local rebels have this afternoon for Bialystok with provisions for the destitute.

PEMBROKE IN DREAD OF NUMBER THIRTEEN

PERCY PEMBROKE.

In Consequence, the Case Will Be Tried by Jury of Fourteen Men.

A remarkable instance concerning the superstition in regard to numbers has been brought to light in the trial of Percy Pembroke for the murder of Thomas Cook out at Fruitvale on the night of July 22 last. The number 13 has caused continuances and delays and considerable calculation on the part of the attorneys and court to avoid placing a hoodoo on the case and spare the feelings of the family of the youth. While Pembroke himself has little feeling about the number, his parents have made strenuous objection through Attorney L. S. Church to having the trial set for the 13th of the month or for the number to figure in any way in the case.

After the third trial was fairly under way and the selection of a jury in progress it was believed that this avoidance of the thirteen was over with, when the specter again suddenly arose when Judge Waste made known his decision of having an extra juror drawn. In the mind of the family of the lad his doom was as good as sealed with this unlucky number of men listening to the evidence in the case, and a twentieth century court

SIERRA NEVADA PLANT FOR REALTY SYNDICATE

Purchase of Contra Costa Company's Holdings Followed by Deal for More Water.

As a sequel to the recent purchase of the Contra Costa Water Company's holdings by the Realty Syndicate, comes the report that the Syndicate has absorbed or is about to absorb what is known as the Sierra Nevada Water and Power Company, whose sources of water supply are the Blue Lakes and the Mokelumne river. By uniting this source of supply with the Contra Costa it is expected that the syndicate will have resources sufficient to meet the wants of Oakland and adjacent cities now furnished with water by the Contra Costa. It is also understood that with this additional supply of water the company will extend its field of operations and deliver water to other cities and towns in the bay counties.

The financial figures of this enterprise have not been made public, but are said to range between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000. The Sierra Nevada Water & Power Company has been promoted by President Martel of the Market-street bank and his associates, with former City Attorney Percy V. Long and his assistant, John S. Partridge, acting as attorneys for the company. This corporation has made two proposals to San Francisco to sell to it all the water rights and properties it possesses in Alpine, Calaveras and Amador counties.

LEADERS DISCUSS OUTCOME

Controversy Over Legislation May Prolong the Session.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—The controversy that has arisen between the president and the house concerning meat inspection legislation and the differences likely to arise between the senate and house relative to the type of canal to be constructed across the Isthmus of Panama were discussed today by senate leaders to determine what effect they will have upon adjournment.

The indications are said to be that the senate could decide relative to meat inspection upon a good and effective measure.

In regard to the canal legislation, the prevailing impression is that the outcome in the event the senate passes the sea level canal bill is that all matters relative to the type would be eliminated in conference from the sundry civil appropriation bill. If this should be done it would leave the president free to carry out his expressed determination to proceed with the construction of a lock canal.

REPAIRS ARE PROGRESSING

Charles Spear Optimistic Over Improvements on 'Frisco Waterfront.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Charles Spear, president of the board of harbor commissioners, stated that the work of repairing the damage done the water front by the big shake and the fire is progressing rapidly, and that in a year's time the front will not only be as good as it was, but a great deal better.

"We have a large number employed," said Mr. Spear, "and I believe that in a year's time all traces of the damage done by the earthquake and fire will have disappeared. Not only that, but the plans of harbor improvement now being tried out on the waterfront will have been extended each way so as to accommodate a great deal of additional shipping.

Before the fire we had as good a harbor as there was in the world, when repairs are completed we will have a much improved harbor, better than the one in the world without question. The fact that there is more than $6,000,000 worth of improvements along the water front means that San Francisco will not only have a great harbor, but one that will be built along the lines of permanency.

"I would say that in a year we will be able to handle more shipping than we did before. There has been practically no damage to the shipping, but the business done, but it differs slightly in character.

"That is, the business occasioned by the fire more than makes up for the amount of business that fell away owing to the disaster."

REPUBLICANS FOR NATIONAL CONVENTION

DAVENPORT, Iowa, June 16.—The county republican convention today elected a delegation to the national convention instructing to support Cummins for governor and W. C. Hayward, of this city, for secretary of state. This action was Scott county's reply to secretary of the treasury Shaw, who came here from Washington to influence the primaries and convention against Cummins.

ROUBLE KEEPS ON.

GRODNO, Russia, June 16.—According to messages received here late today the king continues at Bialystok. The government of Germany and the local rebels have this afternoon for Bialystok with provisions for the destitute.

LAWYERS DEFENDING MRS. LEDOUX PROMISE TO MAKE EXPLANATION

For the First Time Since the Opening of the Trial the Prosecution Attempts to Prove Motive for the Crime of Which This Woman Is Accused.

SKETCH FROM LIFE MADE OF MRS. MIVIGAR, ALIAS ENNA LE DOUX AT HER TRIAL ON CHARGE OF POISONING HER HUSBAND.

Special to THE TRIBUNE.

STOCKTON, June 16.—The Saturday afternoon half holiday did not stop the continuation of the trial of the Ledoux murder trial here. It is drawing crowds every day, and from 250 to 300 women mingle with the men in a scramble for standing room.

The prosecution has practically finished its side of the case, and while the defense had been very secretive. It leaked out this afternoon that it will put witnesses on the stand and that Mrs. LeDoux herself will testify.

The story has been going the rounds here for several days that the defense would submit the case without putting on any witnesses, depending upon the weakness of the prosecution.

BETTY MARTIN TELLS OF THE CHINESE INVASION

She Has a Talk With Editor of Oriental Paper.

(BY BETTY MARTIN.)

From the water front to Tenth, and from Franklin to Alice are signs of the invasion of a race alien to our own. The sights and sounds of Chinatown are ours; not the Chinatown which made San Francisco famous—that Mecca of eastern tourists, without "doing" which no traveller thought he had quite seen California—but one equally pronounced, if smaller. You can even smell it—that curious, indefinable, intangible odor which announces the presence of the Oriental. Then there are the gaudy lanterns swinging in the breeze; the gaily painted signs on red and yellow paper, and the shops with their queer wares already doing a thriving business, including the restaurant which offers "Chop Suey and Noodles" to its patrons. And in and about throng the Chinese refugees, who have quickly and quietly adapted themselves to changing conditions.

Down at the corner of Second street, near Harrison the other day I met a woman, poorly yet decently dressed, at her heels two small boys in nondescript garb. From across the way came sounds of hammer and saw and busy workmen, plying their tools about more than half a block of new buildings.

The woman stopped, and looked dully at the scene, as though not comprehending, then she turned to me, gravely.

"These stores?" I questioned.
"All for Chinamen," she replied, in broken English.
"Backs do store are houses—I use to live in one—da landlord he makes da rent from ten dollar to forty dollar a month, an' I have to move. Now I over there in the basement of thata house—she my friend who live there"—indicating a tiny cottage yonder, "an' I gotta move again. The Chinaman he go there too. My husband he sick in bed all da time for five years—" she shook her head mournfully—"an' I have da four children, two girls—da putta da girls in a home an' my husband day go send to a hospital"—at the thought tears filled her hopeless eyes, "an' me—I not know where I go. She drew her boys closer as if to shelter them from the buffettings of fate, and went her way.

It was the truth she spoke. In that very spot was half a block of cottages set well back from the street. The owner, an Oakland dentist who shall be nameless, derived a not inconsiderable income from those cottages at ten dollars apiece. When the earthquake came he disposed of his holdings to a San Franciscan with an eye to the main chance and a transformation like magic has already taken place. All round about the front these cottages are encompassed with stores which have been leased to Mongolians at forty dollars a month each, and here already the yellow men are encroaching themselves and their families having possibly selected this site for its proximity to the water front regardless of the fact that slimy bulge water is constantly oozing from beneath the ground at their feet.

In the long run it will be better for the white tenants—this forcing into better quarters but it is hard on the individual.

On Alice street a little farther up I met a younger woman, friendly, as was the other.

"Hunting for a house?" inquired she, with rare good fellowship.

"No, just looking at the new buildings. Too bad so many people have to move."

"Yes" was the charitable answer, "but the Chinese have to go somewhere, and they've got money. I live here"—pointing to a shabby two-story frame which constituted one of a row, "and my rent's been raised from seven dollars to thirty-five a month, and Chinamen have already rented the place. I've nearly tramped myself to death looking for another place." Then she smiled, bravely "I think I'm going to buy a house. What's the use of paying rent for years, and then being turned out of your home?"

That was the American spirit of which we are so proud.

Even the office rent of the "Chung Sal Yat Po" has been raised from twenty dollars a month to sixty, and there has been a corresponding increase in rents in every place where the Chinese have gained admittance. The landlords are thriving, if no one else is, and a lot of money has been put in circulation.

"Chung Sal Yat Po" is the name of the Chinese newspaper now being published daily in Oakland—the most successful and powerful Chinese organ in America today, even though it was rendered homeless by the San Francisco fire. Although their presses and type were all destroyed, with true newspaper instinct, which seems to be equally compelling in the Oriental and the American, the editors and managers pulled themselves together and set up business anew on this side the bay. New type was immediately cabled for from Tokyo, and the very latest presses ordered from the East—three of them, and all this paraphernalia is on the way and will be set up in the corrugated iron building in the rear of the business office of the paper. Not that they intend to stay in Oakland—no, they have other plans—these ambitious newsgatherers, which leads to a return to San Francisco when the time is ripe, but at present they are obliged to content themselves in two-story antiquated dwelling set a few paces back from the street. Its down-stair front is punctured by a door and two windows; all day long the door stands hospitably open, and alongside its yawning space is nailed a long wooden sign filled with black painted lettering.

The business office of the "Chung Sal Yat Po" is modest enough looking.

There is the counter behind which sit two Chinamen presumably accountants, either of whom will answer your inquiries in the purest of English. Before them are big ledgers, and on the rear wall pigeon holes full of type. At the time I entered a third man was present, a countryman of the others, older, more grave and garbed in the national costume of his race.

Ng Poon Chew, the editor-in-chief, was upstairs at his desk, but he came down quickly in response to the summons. It would be trite to say that Ng Poon Chew is a well known man if it could not with equal truth be added that he is also a man worth while. He has lectured before all the prominent organizations on the Pacific coast on important subjects relating to China and her attitude toward other nations. His very first appearance in Oakland filled Ebell club to its very doors with the elite of the town, all anxious to hear what Ng Poon Chew had to say in regard to the Boxers, for it was the time of the late war—and it must be confessed that the speaker of the evening most adroitly avoided making remarks which could by any possibility be misconstrued. Since then Ng Poon Chew has lectured before the Starr King Fraternity, the Town and Gown club of Berkeley, the Unitarian club of Alameda, and at least a score of representative San Francisco clubs, therefore his knowledge of the present situation here in Oakland and its probable ultimate outcome is of more than usual importance.

He is a man below the average height with the merest suspicion of growing stoutness about him, and his clothes were those of an ordinary Oakland man of business, to which effect a pair of gold-rimmed spectacles contributed. He came toward me with an alert air.

"Be seated," was his courteous command accompanied by a wave of his hand toward the only chair in the room. As I accepted, Ng Poon Chew took the end of the big lounge opposite and flashed interrogation from his almond eyes.

"Will you tell me something about the Chinese refugees over here?"

"In what particular?" The question came pat.

"Well—I searched about for an opening wedge, "how many are there?"

"About seven thousand altogether."

"Is that all? I thought there were at least twenty thousand."

Ng Poon Chew's hands emphasized dental and his face expressed utter despair at such colossal ignorance.

"Why," exclaimed he, "the entire Chinese population of San Francisco at the time of the earthquake was only thirteen thousand." Then he turned to the man at the other end of the lounge with a question in his native tongue. A short colloquy ensued after which the editor reiterated his statement, this time with a qualification.

"Yes, there are about seven thousand over here—including those in Alameda and Berkeley. There are only about three thousand Chinese in Oakland."

"Really, and do they expect to remain here, the merchants and professionals men?"

"Indeed not!" Ng Poon Chew denied.

"Not in the least. They all want to go back to San Francisco to their old quarters. Oakland is no place for business."

Course of Universal Suffrage and Legal Representation.

The demand for universal suffrage and equal representation is growing apace in the ancient monarchies of the Old World, and with it we are witnessing the gradual decadence and the passing of absolutism in modern government. There has been a tremendous shrinkage in modern times in the monarchical theory of the "divinity of kings." These changes are due to the influence of popular education and the force of example. Some system of popular education has been adopted by all civilized nations and the acquisition of a little knowledge by the masses has created a thirst for more and a realization that they have a right to a voice in their own government and in the selection of the men chosen to frame their laws.

The wonderful success of the self-governing cantons of Switzerland, where universal suffrage and equal representation first took root in Europe, has had its effect on the shaping of the political character of neighboring nations in other ways than as a neutral zone established and maintained for the purpose of arresting the aggressiveness of surrounding states and maintaining the balance of power on the continent. In later years, the triumph of popular government in France, through the exercise of the right of suffrage by the people generally and equal representation in the Chamber of Deputies, has produced the same effect as the example set by the Swiss republic has done on the king and class ridden nations of the continent and stimulated the desire everywhere for political freedom. These are near-by object lessons to the different peoples of Europe which have been more carefully studied, because of their closer proximity than the United States, the parent of modern popular government and the most conspicuous example and development of the republican idea.

One of the most notable illustrations of the progress of universal suffrage and equal representation in recent times is that which has been lately furnished by the political revolution which has been peacefully brought about in Austro-Hungary, where manhood suffrage and equal representation have been finally established after a protracted struggle in the latter kingdom, covering a long series of years, which a few months ago brought the dual relationship to the verge of dissolution. Through a recent imperial decree the people of both nations were granted a free, universal and equal franchise. It constitutes the most liberal and enlightened act marking the long reign of the venerable Emperor Francis Joseph. The magnitude of the political change it has produced will be better understood when it is stated that all class distinctions in political affairs have been totally obliterated by it.

Under the former system of government in the dual kingdoms, a few persons representing a favored class exercised the right of sending a representative to the popular branch of the legislature who wielded equal powers with the representative elected by the combined votes of several hundred thousands of the common workmen of the empire. This distribution of class representation was carried to such a degree that the representation of the masses was in a hopeless minority and all legislation, as a natural result, was enacted in the interest of the nobility, the landed proprietors, and the church. The membership of the Austrian Reichsrath or lower house consisted of five curiae or classes. The inequality of representation was illustrated in a marked degree in the fact that in Bohemia seven nobles were specially clothed with the power to elect a deputy to the House, and in the Tyrol, twelve prelates, who controlled a great convent and church, elected another, whereas, in Krain, 500,000 workmen had the right to choose only one representative. In a legislative body so constituted, the majority of the people in the empire were practically without power or influence.

Under the new system in Austro-Hungary, the constituencies will be evenly divided. The vote of the common laborer, or the workman in town or city, will, therefore, exert the same power and influence at the polls as that of the highest noble or ecclesiastic in the land. The organized commercial bodies have also been stripped of the special electoral privileges they formerly enjoyed, the vote of each member counting now in the general result only, according to the way he desires to cast it.

The elective franchise in Austria is, thus, broader than it is in this country, where its universality is circumscribed by the several States by qualifications governing the right to use it established by each commonwealth according to its own peculiar whim. Obviously, therefore, the people of Austro-Hungary will hereafter be more equally represented in the popular branches of their houses of legislation than the people of the United States are in the lower house of Congress. Excepting Switzerland, no nation in the Old World—not even Great Britain, which is regarded as a democracy in almost everything save name and that insignia of royalty, the crown—enjoys such a broad measure of political privileges and as perfect an equality in the matter of popular political representation as the dual kingdoms of Austro-Hungary.

The political revolution which has thus taken place in these two nations under the beneficent rule of the Emperor Francis Joseph will, doubtless, have great influence in Russia, where universal suffrage and equal representation are among the chief reforms which are being demanded by the people. Such movements are infectious, particularly among a discontented people who witness the enjoyment by the people of neighboring states of those political privileges which are denied to themselves. While the Hungarians obtained them without appealing to the sword and the Austrians were granted them to place them on the same political footing as a measure of justice, the people of Russia are not likely, from all appearances to obtain them without the shedding of much blood. The bureaucracy clings with blind obstinacy to the power which autocratic authority has given it and in its blindness it fails to comprehend that the progress of human freedom, in this enlightened age, is irresistible.

Thirteen prominent Nebraska cattlemen have been indicted by an Omaha grand jury on charges of conspiracy to defraud the Government, subversion of perjury and illegal fencing of public lands. If the Federal Government were to succeed in convicting every land grabber and procure his sentence to suffer the penalty of the law for this kind of fraud, it would be found that there are not jails enough in the country to hold the crowd.

The Bakersfield Californian says THE TRIBUNE argues that the election of a Democratic Governor in Oregon was a triumph for President Roosevelt. Every reader of this paper knows THE TRIBUNE made no such argument. We did state, however, that the general result of the Oregon election was a triumph for the President. We pointed out that the circumstances compelled the Republicans to make a local fight entirely on national issues which did not touch the Governorship. The result was the re-election of Governor Chamberlain, who has made an excellent executive, and the return of two Republican Representatives and one Republican Senator to Congress. Our Bakersfield contemporary simply tries to be clever by distorting what THE TRIBUNE said.

Experiments in Municipal Government.

The cities of Newport, R. I., and Galveston, Tex., have undertaken experiments in municipal government which differ essentially not only from the systems adopted by other municipalities in the country but also from one another. The purpose of both is, however, the same, namely, the production of better results than those previously obtained. Newport has adopted a charter which makes a board of aldermen a strictly executive body, over which the mayor presides. The legislative power is vested in a representative council consisting of 195 members, equally divided among the five wards. It is provided in the charter that this body shall meet annually, and at such other times as it may seem to it wise, or it may be convened by request of the board of aldermen. The latter will submit to the council, whenever it meets, such legislation as it deems necessary for the good of the city. The council will have the exclusive right of adopting or rejecting these recommendations. The aldermen will, also, prepare the annual budget, but the council will make all appropriations. The veto power of such appropriations as exceed $10,000, for purposes not included in the budget, is vested in the municipal electorate, to whom they must be referred for approval or rejection. The board of aldermen's function is to execute the will of the council, and administer the funds that body appropriates for public uses. In a sense, it will be observed that the Newport experiment is a modification of the old New England town meeting system through the submission of all municipal affairs involving revenues and expenditures and the enactment of local laws to a smaller body than that included in the whole citizenship.

Galveston has gone to the other extreme, by placing the legislative and administrative powers in the hands of a small commission, of which the mayor by virtue of his office is a member, elected by the people at large.

In old established communities like the two cities named, either of these forms of local government may prove effective. But it is very doubtful whether it would be possible for any of the younger municipalities—such as have been built up in the Far West—to adopt either form with any prospect of success. Conditions in these newer communities are constantly changing through the steady growth of population and the expansion of their territorial limits. New wants are being created by the natural processes of municipal development which call incessantly for legislative and administrative attention, and many of them are too complex to be properly treated by the simple governmental machinery operated by either Newport or Galveston. Nevertheless, all students of municipal government will, doubtless, be interested in watching the workings of the respective systems of these two cities.

All of the planning for rushing the reconstruction of San Francisco is not confined to the inhabitants of the stricken city. The announcement made Friday that there are thirty-two large tramp steamships and forty big sailing vessels either on the way with cargoes of structural materials, or lying in berth in Eastern and European ports loading the same for this port, is conclusive proof of the energetic efforts which are being made abroad to hasten the rebuilding of the burned district. Besides this fleet of seventy-two steam and sail vessels which have already obtained cargoes, there are said to be twenty other large tramp steamers in European ports listed to sail for San Francisco which will doubtless be loaded with structural materials also. When these facts are combined with the knowledge that every industrial establishment throughout the country engaged in the production of building materials is being strained to its fullest capacity, and that the transcontinental railroads are hustling to increase their facilities for the transportation of their output to San Francisco, the future of that city begins to take on a rosy hue.

The rebel Zulu chief Bambata was slain in battle on June 10th. This will doubtless put an end to the so-called native "hut tax" rebellion in the South African colony of Natal which Bambata stirred up among a tribe of Kaffirs out of revenge for being ousted by the British authorities from an official position which he had abused.

The Baltimore Herald prints a well conducted automobile department in its Sunday issue. Speaking of an article in this paper treating of the splendid service performed by automobiles during and immediately following the great fire in San Francisco, the Herald's auto editor says:

"THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE'S praise of the automobile and the clear way in which it speaks about its advantages is a fine tribute justly deserved. It is good to know that at least one daily newspaper has rendered unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and across the vast space which separates Oakland and Baltimore I reach out to it the hand of good fellowship and brotherly love. Shake!"

We cordially reciprocate the kindly sentiment expressed by our Baltimore contemporary, but we have had all the shaking for the present that we care for. Give us anything but the shake.

The Missouri mule cut a great figure in the Boer war and this much despised beast of burden now promises to display itself in Guatemala, where a thousand of his kind have been shipped to aid the revolutionists.

When 13,000 gallons of whisky recently escaped from a Kentuck distillery and flowed into a neighboring creek, it is not at all strange that the people in that section were all seized simultaneously with a desire for a swim in the stream.

ONE OF THE BEST IN THE STATE.

THE OAKLAND TRIBUNE'S Sunday edition is one of the best issued in the state. In fact, it contains features that place it well in the lead, and again it is free from some other features that detract rather than add to the value of the Sunday issues of the big dailies.—Bakersfield Californian.

TO ALGERNON SIDNEY CRAPSEY.

Our thanks unfeigned to thee, O friend, are due,
Fortuning our hot thought from lifeless creeds
To the inherent worth of noble deeds,
From false and barren statements to the true,
Thus surely leading us all life to view,
As lived under such laws, benign and just,
As he ordaineth whom in love we trust,
No need have we to fret our hearts, and stew
Because the highest seems not to heed our call;
Craven were we and dull, indeed, and blind
Did we not see that all is ours and mire
That thine ere had in field or priestly stall;
Did we not rise with calm and tranquil mind

EDDIE SMITH Interviews

BILLY DELANEY

Billy Delaney, for no one knows how, and such is the character of Billy Delaney.

AS TO CORBETT.

"How did you come to handle Corbett?" Delaney was asked.

"Well," he said, "in 1887 I saw him first, took notice of him, and in the same year sat in his corner and advised him in his fight with Zack Burk. That night he told me that he wanted me to train and manage him, and I prepared him for his memorable battle with Joe Choynski. I then liked him so well that I stayed with him until he retired after the Fitzsimmons contest at Carson."

Although Mr. Delaney has been these many years before the ever-fickle public, handling such celebrities in the heavyweight class as Mike Connolly, Buffalo Costello, Jack Brady, Denver Ed Smith, Mike Cleary, Jim Corbett, Jim Jeffries and now Al Kaufmann, he has always remained the same modest, unassuming "Billy" in adversity and success.

COMING HOME.

When I received a telegram from him Thursday in which he said: "I will be home at five; earthquake country good enough for me," I felt that he meant every word of it. No doubt, however, he had in mind that cozy little home on Nineteenth street, that an anxious wife had all in readiness to receive him back from his eastern trip, and his pet cat and dogs, who, with animal instinct, knew by the hustling and bustling around the house that their master was soon to be home.

TWO CHAMPIONS.

Delaney has the distinction of having successively trained and managed two world's champion heavyweights, both California products, and now he has under his protective wing Al Kaufmann, the young California giant, who seems to have an even, if not better, chance in the scramble to fill the place left vacant by James Jeffries' retirement.

In all this time the finger of suspicion has never been pointed toward the veteran trainer. But I shall not tarry long eulogizing his honesty, for there are men who possess characters that forbid the association of suspicion

"BILLY" DELANEY.

JEFF'S BEGINNING.

When asked if he really thought Jeffries would develop into a champion when he first took him in hand, Delaney, after considerable deep thought, replied: "Yes, and no; in fact, the big fellow had me guessing. He did not show much boxing ability while he was boxing with Corbett at Carson, but his activity and strength took my eye.

"Jeff proved an apt scholar, however, and soon began to show signs of cleverness. When he retired there was absolutely no one left for him to box, and as he had gone over the list of eligibles twice, beating them all, he proved himself the greatest of all

HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPIONS.

NEVER FIGHT AGAIN.

"Now, I know you are going to ask me if I think he will ever enter the ring again," went on the astute Billy. "You can say for me that I am under the impression that when Jeff, young man yet, and has it on the other said he retired he meant it, and that I am of the opinion he will never fight again."

Asked as to Kaufmann's chances, Delaney warmed up and became more enthusiastic. "I like his chances very well," he replied. "You know Al is a man of the opinion he will never fight again."

that he will be improving all the time they are going back, and although it may be a year or so before it comes to pass, I feel sure that he will eventually be the undisputed champion of the world.

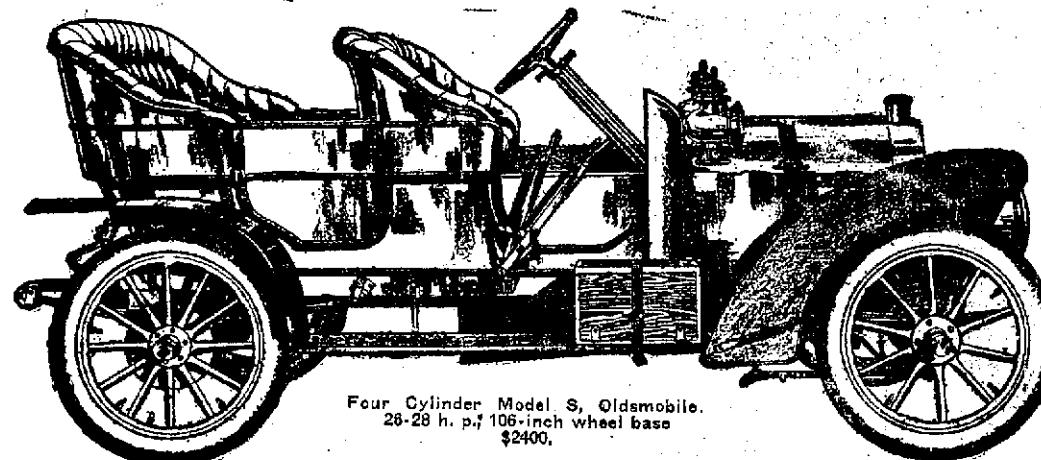

"You know, one thing, I like about him is that he is like Corbett, in that he is always ready and anxious to box any one that comes along. A boxer like that cannot help improving. Of course, he is not as clever as Corbett, or as strong as Jeff, but he has weight, strength, two good hands and a great big heart, which is a combination a man must possess to attain the championship."

TODAY AND YESTERDAY.

I then asked him if he did not believe that the boxers of today were intellectually superior to those of days gone by.

"Well, I should say they are," he replied. "Why, it has been proven since the coming of the Queensberry rules that it takes a man of more than ordinary intelligence to become a champion.

"Then, too," he continued, "there was a time when, if the fighter was not a tough looking Irishman, with his hair cut short, the people did not think him game, and did not care to see him fight. Now we have repre-

PRESS NOTES

Joseph Tracy will attempt to drive a 30-horsepower Oldsmobile from New York to Poughkeepsie today, with the high speed gear thrown in and sealed before the motor is started. Four passengers will be carried. This is said to be the first test of the kind ever attempted.—Automobile News.

One of the most remarkable trips made by an automobile and one that automobileists are still discussing was made on Saturday when a 26-28-horsepower Oldsmobile touring car, with sliding gear transmission, traveled from New York to Poughkeepsie entirely on the high gear. The high gear lever was sealed by members of the technical committee of the New York Motor Club and P. L. Snutzel and E. L. Ferguson, members of the club, accompanied the car. The drivers were Ernest Keeler and Joseph Tracy. Not the slightest difficulty was experienced in making all the hills, afeat that many automobileists considered impossible.—New York Globe, May 21.

Do Not Decide Upon Your Automobile Until You Have Seen the 1906 Oldsmobiles

We are selling this CAR ON SIGHT. You cannot appreciate how smoothly this car runs—how easily it eats up the hills, what an amount of reserve power there is, until you have ridden in it. We want every prospective purchaser of an automobile to let us show him THE BEST MODERATE PRICED CAR ON THE MARKET. We want to demonstrate to you that this car, like all Oldsmobiles, means more for the money than any other automobile. The only way to know about them is to ride in them. We guarantee IMMEDIATE DELIVERY on the Touring Car. You can buy bigger cars at a bigger price—but you can't buy cars that will give better satisfaction at any price—so what's the use of paying more. A demonstration will prove this to you in the first five minutes.

sentatives from every country in the game, even to China."

IN THE EAST.

"How do you think the chances are for boxing to be legalized in the east?" I asked.

After much deliberation he answered:

"When New York takes the ban off boxing, then most every state in the east will do the same. The governor of New York and its legislature set the pace, and the governing bodies of the other states, like automotives, follow in their wake."

THE CAUSE.

"Well, Bill, what is your idea of the cause of closing down the lid on the game in the east?" I asked.

"It was not due to the boxing itself," he replied, "but the money-grabbing club managers, who did not hesitate to pull off all kinds of shady contests. Why, in some of them they were betting on the round that men would be beaten in."

"It may surprise you when I tell you, but I was really glad when the Horton law was repealed, and if the game every gets to where it is, nothing but a graft law, I hope it will be closed here also."

THE REMEDY.

"What do you think would prove a remedy?" was asked.

"That's a very serious question, and I have often thought it over," he answered. "I have a remedy that I think would help considerably, however, and that is to place a high license on the clubs, so that the cheap gamblers cannot get in the game."

"This has proved a great help in handling the saloon question, and while boxing is of an entirely different character, I believe it would help considerably."

POLITICS.

"Then, too, the political situation is being bettered every day, and honest officeholders are reaping their reward by being elected to succeed themselves in their various positions. This greatly helps the boxing situation," he continued, "for where honest men are in office dishes: club managers have little chance to get permits."

After meditating for a moment, he remarked, "Well, I hope that I live to see the time when boxing will be legalized and patronized all over the country, for it is a great game to go by the boards merely because dishonest promoters contaminate it with fakes."

As Mrs. Delaney was busy at the lunch table, and I knew the good things made Billy hungry after not having a home meal for so long, I felt it was time to make my escape. As I left the house, he shouted: "Just say my boy Kaufmann will box anyone in the business."

THE TRIBUNE'S DOUBLE PAGE

START GAME IN CITY IN 30 DAYS

J. Cal Ewing stated to THE TRIBUNE last night that he expects to resume baseball in San Francisco with thirty days. He is now negotiating for a piece of land near the present center of town. He has two or three offers for sites near Filmore street, and will close the deal on one of them within the next twenty-four hours.

He has already arranged for sod to make a first-class grass diamond. A grandstand and bleachers will be erected, and everything made comfortable for lovers of the sport.

"I think it will pay," said Ewing, "as there are plenty of people in San Francisco who will be glad to have a sight of the game again. At any rate, we will come pretty near to breaking even. If we should disband for the year, it would take several twelve months to get going again."

Ewing says that if Alz goes to the outlaw league, which is trying to secure him, he will make the Los Angeles team a present of Gochauer the shortstop who has been loaned to them from the San Francisco club.

DAYTIME BOUT FOR BAT AND HERMAN

CHICAGO, June 16.—The managers of Battling Nelson and Kid Herman, Chicago's "Ghetto champion," were in conference with a matchmaker from Milwaukee who wants the two champions to meet in Milwaukee July 4th.

The proposition is to meet in the afternoon on the ball park grounds in an eight-round bout. It is also planned to have pictures taken of the fight.

The bout if arranged would probably be the biggest drawing card in the pugilistic line in many years. In the middle west it would undoubtedly attract thousands of admirers of the art at Milwaukee. Both Chicago and Milwaukee the "Pettler" is a flesh and blood as it was in these two cities that he started his pugilistic career. Herman also has hosts of friends in the two cities.

WIND-UP FOR COLLEGE TEAMS

The last games of the season for the St. Mary's College baseball teams are to be played today on the campus.

At 1 p. m. the Independents the second team meet the Berkeleys, and at 3 p. m. the Imperials the third team play the Wunder Brewing Company team.

At 3 p. m. there is to be a game between the Martinez Brothers' nine and the Lormans.

WILL ABANDON BLUE-RIBBON MEETING

DETROIT, June 16.—It has been decided to abandon the blue ribbon grand circuit meeting at the Grosse Pointe track schedule for the third week of July and to transfer to the Cleveland track those stakes which have already closed, namely, the merchants and manufacturers for 2 1/4 trotters and the 2 1/8 pacers stakes.

The announcement made several weeks ago by Prosecuting Attorney Hunt that he would prosecute all persons concerned in any pool setting at race tracks in this city is the reason for the action. The Cleveland meeting will be held from July 30 to August 4.

AMATEURS TO PLAY BALL GAME

The Concordes are to meet the Berkeley merchants in a baseball game at Concord today. The Concordes beat the San Pablos last Sunday by a score of 12 to 11, the game ending in a tie, and the San Pablos leaving the field in the first of the ninth inning.

Randolph had a bad day yesterday and had to be taken out of the game.

Young Rodenbach, the champion amateur middleweight of the United States, who showed up so well in the Olympic club tournament and who won a decision over Sam Berger in the more remote past, has applied for a match with Al Kaufmann and an effort may be made to get the two together out here.

There is some talk of an open air boxing match at Point Richmond on the Fourth of July, but as yet the plans are in the air.

The West Oakland club would like to hear from a few good 125 pound boys for their next show.

The match between Fred Landers and Jack Clifford that was to have taken place at Sacramento has fallen through and R. E. Connally of Sacramento is in town trying to match Landers and Eddie Hanlon to take their place.

Devereaux talked himself out of the game yesterday. When he called to McDonald "I have an old goat at home that can umpire better than you," he certainly went too far and there were few in the stand that did not agree that Bill's actions were very childish and unbecoming of a professional ball player.

Young Rodenbach, the champion amateur middleweight of the United States, who showed up so well in the Olympic club tournament and who won a decision over Sam Berger in the more remote past, has applied for a match with Al Kaufmann and an effort may be made to get the two together out here.

Umpire McDonald is losing all control over the players and most of the games resemble sand lot matches in consequence.

A youngster named Constantine made his first appearance in the sixth inning yesterday, taking Randolph's place at first. He fielded well but seemed weak with the stick striking out twice.

The teams of the Independent and the Vampire association clubs will play off the tie for second place in the championship games of the league at Freeman's park today.

W. H. JEFFRIES GOES SHOPPING.

SAM BERGER A JOKE SAYS EDDIE SMITH

By EDDIE SMITH.

nevertheless the contest proved that Sam was no demon.

Then Rodenbach, a middleweight Sam was brought out from New York to Sam to beat. The trophy was to be a large silver cup and it is said Berger was so sure of winning that he told Coffroth to add $150 of his end of the cup to the cup.

But to Sam's surprise, Rodenbach although "at least twenty pounds the lighter man, not only carried the cup back to New York, but handed Sam a good beating in clean-cut fashion.

HAS DONE NOTHING.

Sam has since done nothing to prove that he is entitled to any special attention in the matter of picking his opponents.

He was offered good inducements to meet Al Kaufmann here on the Fourth of July, but after considerable dicker- ing he refused to meet Kaufmann.

There is not one well-posted sporting man in ten who will not say that a contest between Berger and Kaufmann would be the biggest drawing card on the coast of any of the available matches, and as Berger is a shrewd fellow with an ever-ready eye for money, there is only one conclusion to be drawn and that is Berger is to beat than Kaufmann and there would not be as much money in it as to meet him.

LOOKS SUSPICIOUS.

Berger's apparent anxiety to meet O'Brien is rather suspicious, in that O'Brien is as hard if not a harder man to be beaten than Kaufmann.

O'Brien has been in shady fights before and while I believe that he would hesitate to lose to Berger, the match if made, will bear close watching.

Oakland's twelve errors tell the story when the Seals were in danger. The score:

GREAT RACE MEET AT DENVER

BY LEE DEMIER.
Special Correspondent, Tribune.)
DENVER, June 14.—With the greatest array of running and trotting horses ever gathered at a Colorado track, and a gathering of the most prominent horsemen, jockeys and officials ever assembled in the west, the annual nineteen-day racing meet, which opens at Overland Park Derby day, Saturday, June 16, promises to be the most successful and satisfactory of its kind ever held in the Rocky Mountain region.

The downtown hotels are rapidly filling up with bookmakers and horsemen from California. The fine cafe in the Temple Court building, owned by Fred Kish, one of Denver's most noted sporting men, is headquarters for the incoming horsemen and bookmakers.

A Wahlgreen, secretary of the Denver-Overland Racing Club, is busy getting everything in readiness for the opening of the meeting and predicts that the card for the opening day will be the greatest the Denver people have ever witnessed.

I have visited tracks all over the country, said Mr. Wahlgreen, and have seen the best trotters, pacers and thoroughbreds and I can without trying to overpraise our track that we have the highest class and the largest number of horses which have ever been assembled for a race meeting here in the west. We have horses which will leave Denver and go to the cities east and west and beat the best horses which will race there.

The Colorado Derby is to be run on Derby day still be a great race but will not be alone. We have an all-stake card for that day. The A. T. Lewis & Son stake will bring out a field of trotters which seldom are seen in one race. The opening scramble for the runners will bring out a fast field of stake horses such as Corn Blossom and Flying Fox who is racing this year under the name Aaron J. Both the popular and efficient presiding judge at Overland will not return having accepted a similar engagement at the ninety day meeting at Seattle. Mulholland will be succeeded by one of the best judges and recognized authorities on the American turf, Z. G. Stebbins, who has been officiating at Monson's park, Memphis, during the spring meeting. Judge Stebbins is known to be a man of the country over as a fearless and impartial official who plays no favorites and is ever on the alert. The Denver management has received many congratulations upon having secured the services of this most competent official.

Both the runners and harness horses will be cared for this season by Ed Trigler the unassuming but thoroughly able young man who made such an enviable record for himself at Overland last season.

The Denver Derby will be made up of the following well known 3 year-old performers: Miss Tops, Theo Casella, J. Lord Nelson, May Thorn and Valencia.

The handicapping will again be taken care of by Wally Weaver whose courtesy and capability have never been brought into question by horsemen all of whom pay him the compliment of placing entire confidence in his judgment and rulings.

The biggest kind of a sensation is at present, as in the Colorado horsemen of Overland Park, having on the A. T. Lewis & Son's $2,000 trotting stake for 2 20 steppers which will be contested for on opening day.

The class of the horses eligible in the Brown Palace Hotel stakes in case one of the meetings is too high and the 1st includes such well-known performers as Ed Gaylord, Robbie, M. A. Hawbaker, Skiffle, W. A. Chambers, The Major, L. Ewell, Blumenthal, Valencia and Lena. Derby candidates Corrigan and Corn Blossom, owned by H. E. Rowell and Kitchick, are the property of T. L. L. L.

The following jockeys are now on the ground at Overland park and are exercising their charges every morning:

NEWS FROM BERKELEY AND CITY OF ALAMEDA

WEDDING OF ALAMEDANS

Pretty Ceremony Takes Place at the Home of the Bride.

ALAMEDA, June 16.—Miss Aratha Hoover, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hoover of 2853 Jackson street became the bride of Charles B. Forster at eight o'clock tonight at her parents' home. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Norman Guthrie.

The bride was attended by Miss Beatrice Lynn of Fruitvale and Miss Marguerite McLean. The groom was supported by Paul Crane.

The groom is connected with the Alameda post office. The honeymoon will be spent in Santa Cruz. On their return the young couple will reside at the Hoover home.

INOCULATED BY PATIENT

PITTSBURG, June 16.—The Rev. W. A. Roulston, pastor of the Believer Presbyterian church, is in a peck of trouble with his congregation. The church session has appointed a special committee to wait on the Presbytery and ask it to investigate the actions of the pastor.

Mr. Roulston is as angry as the members of his congregation, and it is believed that he will resign rather than submit to an investigation.

A member of the congregation, who is also a member of the special committee, said today:

"It is openly charged that the Rev. Mr. Roulston would rather go to a baseball game or some other place of amusement than visit members of the congregation. He is a young man and full of life, but I consider it the duty of a preacher to give his congregation more attention."

Mr. Roulston will make no statement.

CO-ED, FIRST TEACHER OF MOROS, HOME AGAIN

MISS ESTELLE MURDOCH.

University of California Girl Returns From Stay Among the Savages of Philippines.

BERKELEY, June 16.—Miss Estelle M. Murdoch, one of the University of California girls who was sent by the United States government to the Philippines as a teacher, has returned from the islands and is now residing in Berkeley with her parents, whom she has not seen for five years.

EXPERIENCE.

"I did not know a word of English when I went to the Philippines, but I readily picked up a native dialect which enabled me to make myself fairly understood generally. My pupils picked up English very quickly. I was frequently obliged to make a sketch of the ideas I wanted to convey to the savage mind, on the blackboard. Drawing was a great aid to me. At times it was necessary for me to draw in the dust while I was walking along the street with a Filipino student. Once I used a nail on a piece of soap to convey an idea. The children are very studious, submissive and obedient. The longer you make their lessons the better they like it."

"I met the Filipinos and not the Moros. The Moros are exceedingly hard to manage, because they have never been taught by an American woman, as they are the parents of the Moro children would not submit to their offspring being taught by an American woman, as they thought the American teacher would compel their children to work for them and not get any money for it. They had no conception of a school, nor had they the least idea what the word instruction meant. It took them a year or two to understand what we were really trying to do for them."

DADS GAMBLE.

"They have push and perseverance when once you gain their confidence and arouse their interest. Their parents haven't been of much help to them. Their 'dads' gamble and it is inherent in the Moro child to do likewise; in fact, that is an oriental trait."

ALL IDOLENT.

"I never expect to make university graduates out of them, though they learn rapidly, for they are indolent and improvident. I consider the Filipinos as a race of children, yet in their infancy. They have no incentive to work; they get their food anyway. Money spent on teaching them English is wasted. Good industrial schools is what they need."

SHOELESS CHILDREN.

"The Spanish never allowed a Filipino to wear any kind of a shoe or slipper in their presence, as they thought it did not show the proper respect; neither did they allow the Filipino to wear clothing like their own or similar in style, but now it is not uncommon to see Filipino men or boys employed as household servants wearing the same style of clothing from hat to shoes, collar and cuffs included, as those of his master. One of the first things I did was to provide each one a bath."

PERFUMED SOAP.

"I bought perfumed soap for them, but I never obliged them to use it. Bathing was only introduced recently in the islands. Shower baths are considered a novelty. You can encourage but you can never lead them to a bath. Some few Americans introduced these shower baths, which were greatly needed in the islands."

"The kind of work I taught them was that which they could make a living at. I do not think the Filipinos are improving in a commercial sense. The Americans have made prices at least twice as high as when the Spanish occupied the islands."

SON COMING TO FUNERAL

Inquest Next Wednesday Over Woman Who Died in Alameda Baths.

ALAMEDA, June 16.—The inquest into the death of Mrs. Ella D. Harper, the woman who died suddenly Thursday night while bathing at the Thompson baths in the West End, will be held next Wednesday morning at nine o'clock at the local morgue.

An autopsy has been performed on the remains by Dr. W. C. Smith and he states his belief that the woman was drowned, as there were no evidences of heart trouble or poisoning, and the lungs were filled with water. He gives it as his opinion that she fainted from the effects of the hot salt water and must have drowned while unconscious.

The son of the deceased, W. D. Harper of New York, has telegraphed that he is coming to attend the funeral. James Dunn, a brother, has arrived from Dutch Flat and is making arrangements for the funeral. The remains will probably be interred in Los Angeles.

MOVEMENTS OF ALAMEDA PEOPLE

ALAMEDA, June 16.—Mrs. Phillip S. Teller and her daughter, Miss Alice Teller, are spending the summer at Brookdale.

Mrs. Anna Seebek of 763 Santa Clara avenue, accompanied by her mother, expects to leave soon for a tour of Europe.

Miss Lillian G. Martin has gone to Los Angeles to visit Mrs. J. A. Burton, a former resident of Alameda.

Mrs. M. G. Eyre, with her little daughter, is visiting relatives in Los Angeles.

Mrs. Nellie Bennett, formerly of San Francisco, has taken the Remond home on St. Charles street.

NOT SLAVES.

"I never imposed upon them. They did not feel as though they were slaves. They could see that I was working for their future. In the schools you could not tell a slave from his master. I always treated them as I would like to be treated if I were in their place. I always kept medicine for them. I did the work of a missionary in addition to my teaching. I nursed them when they were ill. There are few native doctors who possess skill. I have never shown them that I was above them in any way. Personally, I believe the Filipinos to be a very shrewd class of people, but they lack the proper environment and education.

NEED COLONIES.

"The best way to educate the Filipinos is to have excellent schools and colonies of thrifty farm laborers, because their lands are rich. There are some individuals who show a great deal of intelligence and industry and are exceedingly honorable about many little things which the average Filipino doesn't consider essential.

"I do not think the Filipinos will ever be able to be self-governing.

"Fifty years is the nearest to hope for, and I doubt whether they ever will be able to. You can't hustle the east. They must grow out of their 'malo costumes' or bad habits, as they grew into them. Judging from the number of centuries they have been enjoying their costumes, it is foolish to expect to reform them in a minute."

The binding material, the "clay," that

RAISE FUND FOR SCHOOLS

Alameda Young People Give a Performance for a Good Purpose.

ALAMEDA, June 16.—Last evening a number of young people produced the "Beauty and the Beast" at the home of C. V. Rowe, 2123 Eagle avenue. The affair was given to raise funds to contribute to the rebuilding of the San Francisco schools. The affair was a grand success and $19 was raised toward the fund.

The cast was as follows: Cassim, an Eastern merchant, Minnie Kist; Ruby, Beauty and Emerald, Cassim's daughters, Calley Blackford, Frances Rowe and Myrtle Hendrich; Faustina and Sycamore, slaves, Ruby Schloss and Ethel Rowe; Fairy, Ethel Rowe; Mary and Boy, servants of The Beast; Helen Blackford and Harry Annesley; The Beast, a prince under a spell, Kenneth Rogers.

Marches, herald conditions exist in the arid region as well.

The large deposits of almost fresh granite sand at the base of the southern arid ranges, so coarse that the trees and seeds must be planted far below the surface in order to maintain life, while in the Alleghenies a clay subsoil formed in places lies within a foot of the surface on which the planting is done, are a practical demonstration of the greater intensity of clay formation in the humid regions.

PREScribed DEPTHS.

In the humid region the humous soil as a rule extends only from six to nine inches from the surface, these being the depths prescribed by the eastern experiment stations for the taking of samples of "surface soil," beneath which follows almost invariably a more clayey subsoil, which as a rule is inadequate to the growth of crops, so that not more than half an inch of it is allowed to be plowed up to the surface at once, on pain of spoiling the seed-bed for the succeeding year at least. There are California soils in which the humus has been determined as reaching to the depth of twelve feet.

OFF TO FIJI WITH MULES

Stanford Student Says He Prefers Them to Shafts and Winzes.

MARTINEZ, June 16.—A mining engineer from Stanford University deserted shafts and winzes and started out in charge of 1060 mules for Fiji yesterday morning. His name is Lloyd Crowe, and the reason he gave for preferring mules to mines was that he was tired of knocking around the country talking about ores. From Fiji he is going around the world and expects to reach England in time for the Epsom Downs races next spring.

The mules were shipped in the steamer Ingradoe by Balfour, Guthrie & Co. from the California docks near here and are consigned to the Colonial Sugar Refinery Company of Fiji. The president of the company, T. V. Hughes, went along as a passenger.

PRETTY GIRLS OF MARTINEZ CONTEST

MARTINEZ, June 16.—The Martinez Volunteer Fire Department is going to Antioch on July 4 and is training every night to win the hose-cart race. A fierce contest for fire queen is in progress, with some twenty of the prettiest girls in town as candidates. So far Miss Corel Selby is in the lead, with Miss Hattie Rodgers a close second.

DEATH OF A SAN LEANDRO PIONEER

SAN LEANDRO, June 16.—After months of suffering, Manuel Enos, the well-known merchant, passed away at an early hour on Friday morning. Mr. Enos was a native of the Azores and for many years followed the sea, visiting various parts of the world. For the last quarter of a century he has conducted a store on San Lorenzo avenue. He was a quiet, unassuming man, who had the respect and confidence of his neighbors, and his death will be regretted by all who knew him.

LIVERMORE PRIEST IS VICTIM OF ACCIDENT

Other People of the Same Town Meet With Injuries--Personal Notes.

LIVERMORE, June 16.—Rev. Father P. Power is at present an inmate of St. Joseph's Hospital in Stockton as a result of an accident he met with Monday afternoon. In company with Archbishop Riordan of San Francisco, Father Power drove to Pleasanton Monday afternoon. In passing by a tree laden with luscious cherries, Father Power stopped and stood up in his buggy to reach a branch of the tree. His action startled the mare, which sprang ahead, hurling the priest heavily to the ground. He sustained a broken collar bone and a severe shaking up, but will soon be again.

Antone Gardella's youngest son, Frank, was kicked in the face by a young colt with which he was playing last Monday and received a deep cut on the chin in consequence.

While Dan Fallon, the twelve-year-old son of "Billy" Fallon, was helping to corral some cattle, the colt on his saddle broke and he fell heavily to the ground, sustaining a fracture of his right arm at the wrist.

George Jackson is at home at present, suffering from a bad gash on his face, as a result of being struck by a flying piece of rock while at work in the new Western Pacific tunnel beyond Almonton.

Another engine has been added to the equipment of the Livermore Traction Company. This last one is No. 5, and is larger and more powerful than any of the others. It was built by Daniel Best of San Leandro and starts to the magnesium mines on Friday for its trial trip.

The Fraternal Brotherhood elected the following officers for the ensuing term at their last regular meeting on Monday evening: President, N. B. Inman; vice-president, J. C. Scott; secretary, Mrs. Dr. McGh; chaplain, Mrs. N. B. Inman; sergeant-at-arms, W. D. Dutcher Jr.; master-at-arms, Violet Buchanan; inner doorkeeper, I. C. Cull; outer doorkeeper, S. Sorenson; musician, Mrs. H. R. Crane. The installation will occur on July 9. It will form the Livermore Association's plant at this point, reports that their two large buildings at the wharf are to be supplemented by a third, which is to be ninety feet by twenty feet.

There will be a game of baseball on the local grounds Sunday afternoon between the home team and the J. Breuners of San Francisco.

The Livermore Grammar school closes on Friday, June 16, for a summer vacation of two months.

Mrs. J. K. Warner is enjoying a visit from Mrs. Judge Cobb of San Jose.

Thomas Twohey Jr. has gone to Adams' Springs for a stay of several weeks.

Miss Lillie Platte of Oakland is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Goren.

Mrs. M. A. McBride has moved from Livermore to Oakland, where she will reside with her daughter thereafter.

Mrs. C. H. Packard and children and Miss Kathryn Taylor of San Francisco are guests of their brother, William H. Taylor.

WILLING TO GO TO NAPA

Fruitvale Board of Trade Will Be Well Represented at County Meeting.

FRUITVALE, June 16.—The Board of Trade met last Tuesday night. It was decided to send a delegation to the convention of the Promotion Committee, to be held in Napa on Saturday, June 16. The following members declared their willingness to attend: Charles F. Fee, H. Barkmeyer, W. T. Grubb, E. H. Marwedel and John Hold.

The Board of Trade will move to the office of Charles F. Lee. The present accommodations, which were leased from Mr. Bolesworth, are now needed by him to enlarge his business.

Electon of officers will take place at the first meeting in July.

The executive committee for the relief board appointed by the Board of Trade reported that in the near future a full report would be presented.

GIVEN CONTRACT ON ODD FELLOWS' HALL

SAN LEANDRO, June 16.—Contractor Anderson has been awarded the contract for building the addition to the Odd Fellows' Hall. He is to receive $7500 and he broke ground for the work on Thursday.

The colored bicyclist, whom ex-Councilman Boyer of Oakland so cleverly captured at Almonton a week ago, was arraigned before Justice Quinn on Monday. He pleaded guilty and escaped with a sentence of ninety days in the county jail.

The colored bicyclist, whom ex-Councilman Boyer of Oakland so cleverly captured at Almonton a week ago, was arraigned before Justice Quinn on Monday. He pleaded guilty and escaped with a sentence of ninety days in the county jail.

The contract for another new hay warehouse was let last Saturday to C. W. Bradshaw by the Farmers' Warehouse Company. The new building is to be 226 feet long by 72 feet wide and will be of corrugated iron.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the M. E. Church is to give a social at the home of Mrs. D. M. Tetter on the afternoon of June 20. Mrs. Tetter will be assisted on that occasion by Messrs. Baker, Wilder and Taylor.

The children of the Sunday school of the M. E. Church are to have their annual picnic and outing today. The scene of the festivities is on the Arroyo Valle near Cresta Blanca, a spot that is rapidly becoming popular as a picnic ground.

Mrs. M. A. McBride has moved from Livermore to Oakland, where she will reside with her daughter thereafter.

Mrs. C. H. Packard and children and Miss Kathryn Taylor of San Francisco are guests of their brother, William H. Taylor.

PREPARING FOR GLOVE FACTORY AT HAYWARD

Real Estate Deals--High Price for Apricots--Teacher Surprised by Her Pupils.

HAYWARDS, June 16.—Despite the fact that the money is coming in slowly and not near enough has been subscribed, the officials of the new Hayward Improvement League are going right ahead with preparations for the glove factory as if they had money in plenty.

Mr. Lewis, sending his force over here already and delay means a big loss to him. The election of officers will take place at the first meeting in July.

The executive committee for the relief board appointed by the Board of Trade reported that in the near future a full report would be presented.

GIVEN CONTRACT ON ODD FELLOWS' HALL

SAN LEANDRO, June 16.—Contractor Anderson has been awarded the contract for building the addition to the Odd Fellows' Hall. He is to receive $7500 and he broke ground for the work on Thursday.

The leading spirits in the movement are being congratulated on all sides for the prompt action in having the building started on its way to the factory site. Mr. Russell, on account of its size, is now moving the former brewery in three sections.

The call for the funds to be paid in is meeting with a hearty response and further contributions are being added daily.

TEACHER GIVEN SURPRISE.

Miss Mansfield, class of the Hayward Grammar school gave her a very delightful surprise party on Saturday evening at her home on Castro street. Many games were played and refreshments served. They had a very pleasant time.

Those present were: Miss Mansfield, Aldine Leonard, Margaret Silva, Margaret Farro, Hazel McCoy, Christine Souza, Fanny Abrams, Veronica Torney, Verna Chisholm, Myrtle Kelsey, Pauline Hobler, May Lillibridge, Ruth Long, Meroy Winton, Helene Powell, Lorine Ramage, Genevieve Nelson, David Galbraith, Clarence Johnson, Bert Cooper, Warner Hanes, George Marshall, Frank Mederos, King Mederos, Thomas Mansfield, Mr. and Mrs. G. Mansfield.

APRICOTS $60 PER TON.

Frank Winton states that he has been offered $60 per ton by the Farmers' Association for the few apricots he has in his orchard, but he is holding out for $100. His crop at that price would not net a very large sum, that particular fruit is so scarce this year. Up in his Castro Valley orchard.

Miss Mamie Connelly and Miss Lizzie House of San Francisco are paying a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Whelton of Castro Valley this week.

MEALS WILL COST A DIME

San Leandro Relief Committee Turn Money So Secured Back into Fund.

SAN LEANDRO, June 16.—At the meeting of the executive and auditing committee of the relief committee it was decided to move the cooking department down to the old office of the San Leandro Lumber Company. This will be nearer for the employees of the cannery, as it is but a few hundred feet from the main building. It was also decided to charge ten cents for each meal served and this money is to be turned over to Treasurer Lynch to be used again for the benefit of the refugees. It was also decided that hereafter rations will be issued twice a week and that those desiring the same must call for them. These changes were presented to Major Erwin, who is in charge of the relief work on this side of the bay and was approved by him.

One ton of flour and one ton of potatoes were sent here by the San Leandro Relief Committee on Monday.

HORSESHEO PULLS TEETH FOR GIRL

WINSTED, Conn., June 16.—George W. Jones, the village blacksmith of Winsted, while busy blacksmithing yesterday, had a call from Miss Anderson, a young woman who asked him to do some dentistry work for her. On examination he found it necessary to extract one dozen teeth.

Mr. Jones performed the operation with the ability of an expert. Miss Anderson returned to her home about two miles away, none the worse.

PADDING THE SOCIAL COLUMNS.

The society gush writers are having a very hard time trying to earn their money these days. There is absolutely nothing doing of the social character, and the smart set is all disorganized, being scattered all over the state. Social obligations have been declared off, many of the climbers are waiting for their insurance money, and not even those that have money in bank are in the humor to splurge or do anything to justify a write-up. Nevertheless the gush writers are keeping their favorites in the public eye. Madame La Bavarde tell us something about the Stents every other night, though hardly anybody knows just what part the Stents play in social or financial circles. However it is quite evident that along with a few others they are on the Bavarde staff and are entitled to mention in and out of season. So short is the news crop that Helene Robson, a very nice young girl, favored with the limelight, has had her proposed trip to the Orient and her change of mind mentioned about forty times in a fortnight. We shall probably never hear the end of the news of the removal of the Jack Spreckels to a cosy cottage in San Rafael, for that item has become a "filler" in the social columns. And as for Frances Joliffe—well, by actual count we have been told eighteen times that she was in Europe at the time of the earthquake, fourteen times that she had returned, four times that she was in Oakland, twice that she was in San Francisco and six times that she was expected before the end of the week. I wish Frances would tell us just where she is. The whole city, including the Mayor and Abe Ruef, would like to know.—Town Talk

ALL OFF FOR THE DEBUTANTES.

None of the star debutantes who promised to make this season the record one will make their best bow this year. Helene Irwin, who was to be the bright particular star, will probably, I am told, make her debut in Philadelphia under the management of her aunt, Mrs. Robinson. There is some talk of the Gaiety club renewing its festivities this season, but no effort will be made to start the ball a-rolling in the absence of Christine Pomeroy, who is in Europe. The Pomeroy's are in San Rafael this year and will probably remain there during the winter months.—Town Talk.

TOO DULL FOR THE HILLS.

It was owing to the protracted of a colorless and dull social season that the Horace Hills packed their trunks and started on a journey to the East and Europe. Mrs. Hill was one of the most active of the anti-earthquake hostesses, and she went in very strong for an artistic atmosphere, being desirous of giving her drawing-room a New York tone. Zele de Lussan and Frank Pollock and other well known artists have contributed to the gayety of evenings in her home. The Hills suffered very little financially from the fire.—Town Talk

THE BORELS IN THEIR CHATEAU.

The feminine members of the Borel family have decided to spend the next few years in their chateau in Switzerland. Antone Borel was in Switzerland at the time of the catastrophe and returned only a few days ago. He reports that his losses were not very large, but he was one of the principal stockholders in the California street road, and the people that control the corporation seem to have a very hard time recovering from the shock. I hear that they would be very glad to sell to the United Railroads. Borel has always handled a great deal of French capital but he is a very conservative operator. The Borel mansion, which was to have been the scene of much festivity following the nuptials of the two daughters this winter, has been rented to the Pacific-Union club, a circumstance that has given rise to the suspicion that the banker found a twist in his bank roll after the earthquake. Both Miss Alice and Miss Sophie Borel will be married next spring. Lupita Borel was to have made her debut this fall, and there was to have been a great deal of entertaining in her honor. Indeed, as a motif, she was to have rivaled Helene Irwin. The extent of the social slump may be gauged from the circumstance that the Borels and Irwins have abandoned their program, as well as from the fact that none but obscure climbers are now figuring to any extent in the gush columns.—Town Talk.

SOME GOLF JINGLERS.

Some of the golf players that frequent the Presidio links sat down to dinner the other night which was enlivened by impromptu verse-making. One of the cleverest of the verses, written by a young matron with a knack for deft allusion, is as follows:

"A novice played, but his stroke was wild,

And he almost murdered a caddy child;

Though his play was slow and his look was mild,

And he tried to loft with his cleek, O."

A young insurance man who prides himself on having facility reeled off this parody:

"A novice played, but his stroke was wild,

And he smashed a maid where she wasn't tiled;

Though his play was slow and his look was mild,

—Town Talk.

MURPHY'S RESIGNATION.

When, shortly after the fire, the announcement was made of the change in the presidency of the First National bank, Rudolph Spreckels having been substituted for that veteran financier, S. G. Murphy, great was the curiosity aroused in the business community, and it was at once surmised that there had been occasion for grave dissatisfaction with the management. It was explained that Mr. Murphy had resigned, feeling that the strenuous times a-coming would prove too great a tax on his energies. This was a plausible explanation. Mr. Murphy is a very old man, and besides he is rich enough to retire and take his ease during the remainder of his days. However, in the business community, Mr. Murphy was never regarded as a quitter. He was looked upon as a man of extraordinary zeal in the money-accumulating pastime, and many of his acquaintances were so strong in the conviction that he would not voluntarily withdraw from the cool shade of the First National vaults that they were inclined to scoff at the story of his resignation. They asserted that no such trivial force as that of an earthquake could shake the zealous Mr. Murphy out of the financier's harness. Consequently there has been much speculation as to what happened just before the change of management. There is a story in circulation in club circles to the effect that Mr. Murphy was in a state of panic immediately after the fire, and that he was afflicted with a delusion regarding the true state of affairs. That story is also quite plausible. Indeed, many men that are far more phlegmatic than Mr. Murphy entertained extravagant views about financial conditions after the fire. But of course it behooved bankers to look cheerful. Most of our bankers did present a very cheerful aspect and by doing so they inspired confidence. Perhaps if we had a photograph of Mr. Murphy taken during the days of terror it would help to assuage curiosity regarding his resignation from the presidency of the bank.—Town Talk.

SPARE US FROM MARKHAM.

Rev. Mr. Rader wants Poet Markham "to return to San Francisco and sing among the ruins a song of California victory—of victory over death and the grave." Markham will do much better if he stays where he is and continues to shed the luster of his presence on pink teas and culture clubs. The earthquake was bad enough, and the fire was worse, but the worst part of the whole calamity is the aftermath, the lurid descriptions of what never happened, the fake pictures and fearful "poems." We have had just about as much as we can stand in the way of disaster, and it is high time to protest against having it rubbed in. The only "songs amongst the ruins" that we want to listen to are those of the humming steam saw and the rhythmical carpenter's hammer. This is the day for the practical music of manual labor. Any poe who comes out here to jingle words should first be obliged to jingle a few dollars into the treasury. Let each and every one of them be obliged to take out a license of a hundred dollars per year, and the proceeds be applied to the rehabilitation of the schools. That would be a more creditable plan than exposing the ignorance of the pupils in order to wheedle the candy pennies from other little ones. After the earthquake of '68 a prominent member of the aristocracy of that Seventeenth and Valencia streets, extending half a block on each street, was laid out in lawns and garden, and the house and stables were frame structures, entirely destroyed, so that there is no debris to clear away, but Mr. Phelan has a sentiment for the place where he grew up, where his sister was married and from which his parents were carried to their last home. It is only a few years since the home was rebuilt, so that it was scarcely recognizable as a landmark, but even then some of the apartments around which memories clustered were left untouched. Now that the utilitarian is ousting the esthetic, stores are being planted where flowers once held sway, and every lot owner with a ten foot alley is utilizing the last inch of space as a rent producer. The Phelan garden will, when restored, be more than ever a thing of beauty and a rest for tired eyesight.—Town Talk.

date took his two sons east to put them in school where their precious lives would be safe, but before the father had fairly arrived in San Francisco on his return he was met by a letter requesting him to come and get his boys and send on the earthquake. We do not particularly crave another shake-up at this minute, nor another fire, but we could stand either or both better than any more rhyme. It will be time enough to talk and to read by and by when the refugee tents have made way for substantial dwellings, when the debris is all removed and people have earned their right to leisure by the sweat of their brows.—Town Talk.

HIS ARTISTIC TASTE.

Rev. Dr. Rader has joined the ruthless crew of Ibsen-swallers. He says he is familiar with "Peer Gynt," and he doesn't approve the Norseman's pessimism. The only literature worth while, according to Dr. Rader, is the literature that tends to gladden the heart and add to the pleasures of existence. If what Eila Wheeler Wilcox writes could be called literature that is probably what Dr. Rader would recommend. But the reverend gentleman is not consistent in the expression of his literary tastes since he acclaims the author of the Hoeman, a most somber and chilling piece of verse, and condemns Ibsen because he thinks the playwright is a grumbler and a cynic. All of which bears out what has been said in the columns of this paper regarding the popular misunderstanding of Ibsen. The playwright was quoted to show that he really considered himself the sort of man that Dr. Rader thinks he was not. And, by the way, in the Current Literature for June we are told that the plays of Ibsen have been described as "a long litany praising the man that wills," and that Ibsen himself, in his recently published "Letters," has made it clear that the motive underlying all his work and life has been a passion for self-realization; that, in a hundred different ways, he endeavors to convey to his audience a fundamental message which might be stated in ethical terms thus: "Be true to yourself. Be true to the highest that you know, at whatever cost. This is the only thing in life that is important." If that be really the import of Ibsen's message, and Dr. Rader could be convinced that it was, he would become a convert to Ibsenism. Meanwhile, for the reason that he dislikes Ibsen and condemns him as unworthy of being read, he feels, of course, that we should also shun the works of that other poet who wrote a very gloomy play called "Hamlet," since it is filled with hate and despair, and a play called "Othello" that has morbid jealousy for its theme, and a play called "The Merchant of Venice" that deals with greed, revenge and other disagreeable emotions.

PAGEANT TO BE UNIQUE

Thousands of Americans Want to See the Spectacle at Warwick.

LONDON, June 16.—There already is a great rush for hotel accommodations at Warwick on the part of American visitors, for the Warwick pageant, which takes place in July, and which will be the most unique out-of-door spectacle yet presented in this country.

A number of Americans are taking rooms at Leamington and Stratford-on-Avon for the week, and will drive over every day to the pageant.

Louis N. Parker, the dramatist, who is organizing the whole spectacle, is being inundated by letters from Americans who implore him to secure suites for whole families. Mr. Parker at last has made it known that he is not an apartment agent, but that there soon will be established a bureau for rooms in Warwick, where everybody can apply for accommodation. Two thousand persons are already busy rehearsing their parts for the pageant.

CHAMBERLAIN TO BACK NEWSPAPER

LONDON, June 16.—There has been much mystery about the new one-cent newspaper, "The Majority," which has as its Utopian object the uniting of the labor party and the capitalists, whom the former is always decrying. It is now known positively that Joseph Chamberlain is back of the enterprise, although he has not actually put capital into it.

The men whom he has interested in the scheme have, however, subscribed $500,000 so far, and the promoters have offered several labor leaders $250 each to write short articles for the first number of the paper.

One labor member responded and has been severely lectured by his party, as it is learned that the real object of "The Majority" is to win the labor party over to protection or tariff reform.

SMALL HATS ARE NOW THE STYLE IN PARIS

MRS. W. K. VANDERBILT.

PARIS, June 16.—What protest and supplication, attack by onslaught or supplication, failed to effect for play-going man, woman has herself undertaken to accomplish in his interests.

The leaders of fashion in Paris have formed the League of Little Hats, the declared object of which is to give the

WILHELM IS GREAT JOKER

Sends Princess a Ton of Soap for Her Spring House-cleaning.

BERLIN, June 16.—How the Kaiser helped in "Princess von Buelow's spring house cleaning is being related in court circles. The princess, who is the imperial chancellor's wife, remarked one day to the emperor that her house was in need of a scouring.

"May I help you to clean it?" he asked. The princess jokingly replied that she would be delighted.

Next day a number of heavy cases were delivered at the Buelow mansion. They were accompanied by a letter from the emperor, saying that he was doing his share of the cleaning by sending her a ton of soap.

who had the courage to first grapple with so unpopular a philanthropy. And, being a woman, she realized that no argument based on mere humanity would carry the necessary conviction and oust the bonnets. To make the reform certain it was obligatory to change the fashion. Therefore she enlisted the co-operation of some of the richest and most stylish leaders of the "great world." They not only readily gave their assent to appear at the play in a so-to-speak decollete headpiece, but arranged a bazaar at the residence of one of the fashionable on Rue d'Asborg, where they sold small bonnets made by their own fair hands at enormous prices, giving the profits to charity and the new mode to the women who would lend it the cachet of elegance.

The hats had a pronounced success, the aristocratic names attached being sufficient to charm with.

The leading milliners became interested, too, and supplied some models. They were quick to see that it would be not only profitable but imperative to bow to the decree of such dictators in high society as the Princess de Lulinge, Duchess de Fesenzac, Duchess de Gutche, Marchioness de Jaucourt,

GERMANY IMPRESSED BY RELIGIOUS PLAY

Said to Rival Passion Play by Its Exalted Diction and Scenic Grandeur.

BERLIN, June 16.—"Paulus" (St. Paul), a religious drama of extraordinary power, with Paul on Mars Hill preaching, and afterward before the Athenian Areopagus. Two hundred persons appear in this scene—Greek priests, philosophers, worshippers of beauty, courtesans—all affected by the new teaching of the great apostle to the Gentiles.

The great cost of putting the play on the stage at Erfurt has been borne by two petty sovereigns, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a nephew of King Edward. The Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, who inherits fine artistic qualities, superintended its preparation.

The first act shows Saul of Tarsus, a fierce, fanatical Pharisee, persecuting the Christians. His only soft point is his love for a Christian maiden, and it early becomes clear that her influence will shape his future.

In the second act he is Paul. The miraculous conversion on the way to Damascus is not portrayed, but it is made known that the Christian girl has been praying for him, and that he has been smitten with blindness in answer to her intercession.

The third act, the most magnificent in the play, told in Athens, culminates in a scene of tremendous power, with Paul on Mars Hill preaching, and afterward before the Athenian Areopagus.

Competent critics predict that it will rival the great Passion Play at Oberammergau.

The great cost of putting the play on the stage at Erfurt has been borne by two petty sovereigns, the Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, a nephew of King Edward. The Grand Duke of Saxe-Weimar, who inherits fine artistic qualities, superintended its preparation.

The fourth act shows Paul in the barracks of the Pretorian cohort at Rome while Nero is Caesar. It also has a magnificent, realistic setting, and in the speeches of the apostle and the two centurions the language is eminently classic in its dignity and elevation.

Nero is the center of interest in the fifth and last act, in which the fall of Rome is reproduced with thrilling realism.

This act has been criticized because the terror and grandeur of the setting throw into the shade Paul's martyr death.

STAMPS ARE ON EXHIBITION

Crocker Collection Attracts Much Attention in London.

LONDON, June 16.—Royalty and Americans have been comparing stamp collections at the International Philatelic exhibition held at Westminster, where nearly $3,000,000 worth of rare stamps are on show. The Prince of Wales was one of the largest exhibitors, and there were valuable stamps from the greatest collections in England, America, France, Germany and Italy.

The Prince of Wales, who has been an enthusiastic philatelist since he was a midshipman in the royal navy, sent the two most valuable stamps in the world. They are the penny and two-penny Mauritius, surcharged "post office" and issued in 1847. The two-penny stamp, which is an unposed specimen, was bought by the prince at public auction last year for $7,200.

Henry J. Crocker of San Francisco exhibited his unique collection of Hessianian stamps, which were saved by a margin of two days from destruction by fire, being sent to this exhibition.

SILENCE SOCIETY THRIVES IN PARIS

PARIS, June 16.—The Silence society of Paris has just held its annual meeting. According to the report by the secretary the club has proved a great success, and all its members have greatly benefited thereby.

The rules of the society do not call for absolute silence, but the members are supposed not to talk unless they have something to say. Chattox is absolutely tabooed. Each member pledges himself—the club is exclusively for men—to avoid noisy places and participation in public demonstrations. At the recent meeting the members declared that since they joined the club their nervous systems were in much better order.

ARREST FIERCELY RESISTED

Police Have Battle With Prizefighter and His Companion.

William L. Hovey, proprietor of a dancing academy at Broadway and Eleventh street, was viciously assaulted about 8:30 last night by George Omerod, a young prize-fighter, and George Connolly, a chum, who because they were ordered out of the dancing academy, attacked Hovey, and would doubtless have beaten him to death but for the timely arrival of Patrolman Thornwald Brown. When the trouble started Hovey left the hall and went to summon an officer and as he reached the street Omerod and Connolly with a companion, attacked him and knocking him down proceeded to beat and kick him as he lay prostrate on the ground.

RESIST OFFICERS.

Attracted by the battle on the street Officer Brown ran to the scene and placed Connolly under arrest. On seeing the officer approaching, Omerod took to his heels, but after securing Connolly, Brown gave chase, and overtook the fleeing man between Tenth and Eleventh streets on Broadway. Amerod finding that he could not escape turned savagely on the policeman and the latter, handicapped by Connolly's having his hands full when Constable Bert Hempstead attracted by the crowd arrived and took a hand in the fracas, with the result that Amerod was quickly overpowered and handcuffed. The third man escaped.

CHARGES OF BATTERY.

Amerod and Connolly were taken to the city prison where they were booked on charges of battery and disturbing the peace. Amerod has been in trouble many times with the police of this city. He poses under the name of "Young Dempsey" as a prize fighter, and he was scheduled to contest in the main event at the boxing show of the West Oakland Athletic Club but it is probable that he will now be among those who are "unavoidably absent."

Some Inside Facts
About the Insurance Gamblers

THE KNAVE

Very Good Story on
I. W. Hellman, the Great Banker

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—A week ago I gave you inside information about the plans of the insurance robbers—sometimes called managers of insurance or assurance concerns. I told you that the problem confronting these gentlemen and erstwhile eminent citizens was how not to pay the policyholders all that is coming to them.

They seem to be succeeding pretty well, according to the daily press, for over sixty of them are now banded together to compel the fire victims to accept seventy-five per cent of their policies or nothing—all the while praying that they will accept nothing.

I am told by a trustworthy and almost honest insurance agent that the big losses will not be made good for two years at least. In the meantime there will be innumerable suits to recover money due on policies, all of which will have a tendency to popularize the socialistic dogma that the only proper insurance is government insurance.

Some of the thieving companies are trying to terrorize their victims by declaring that henceforth they will do no more business in California if they are forced to give up their ill-gotten gains. The sooner these gentlemen (I use the term in the sense that the modern confidence operator is called a gentleman by the police reporters) are kicked out of this state the better for all concerned. So long as they are permitted to do business here a premium is placed upon theft. Their presence and business methods are the surest way to misguide the youth of the state from the paths of rectitude and virtue to Sin City or Folsom.

John Tait will open his new cafe on the Eddy street and Van Ness avenue Monday night. His former partner, Gustave Mann, is running the Hotel Majestic, one of the best hotels that San Francisco has ever known. Both men will give their patrons the same class of food they served at Zinkand's, which they were running at the time of the fire.

The average person has doubtless often wondered how the big cafes of the old town could make a profit while operating under such enormous expense. During a talk with one of Tait's backers the other evening I learned that the profits of the Cafe Zinkand, while under the management of Tait and Mann, were $5000 a month. In addition to this, Tait, Mann and Zinkand received monthly salaries of $500. Zinkand, however, had nothing whatever to say in the management. Tait's new place will be located in the former residence of Judge William T. Wallace.

To know I. W. Hellman is to admire him.

There is not a banker in all San Francisco who will not join in that sentiment. He has struggled from nothing to the top of the local financial ladder, and never has stopped long enough in his progress upward and onward to scorn the humble means by which he ascended.

In the full flush of his glory as a manipulator of money there is none to rebuke him for his pride in announcing to the committee of forty that "WHERE I AM THERE IS THE FINANCIAL CENTER OF SAN FRANCISCO."

Such a declaration by any other banker on this side of the bay might be misconstrued into a display of egotism; but from I. W. Hellman it comes as naturally as comes the perfume from the rose. And I must admit that I admire him for casting aside false modesty in order to let the people know that so far as banking over here he is concerned he is it. Possibly he might not be as big a man in Oakland as he is in San Francisco, but that's another story.

There are some men simple enough to think that Mr. Hellman rose to the crest of the local money mart by luck and not by shrewdness and deliberation. If such there be let them lose their illusions at once. Hellman is no financial accident. He didn't just happen. He grew in accordance with a well defined scheme.

Here is an example of his unparalleled cleverness in the ways of the financier:

As soon as it became certain that the city would burn down, Hellman advised his colleagues at a meeting of the Clearing House to get together and hire all the safe deposit vaults on both sides of the bay so the people would have no place to store their money in case they started a run on the savings banks.

Now that is what I call a clever banking trick, notwithstanding the fact that the other financiers absolutely refused to seriously entertain it. Some of the ordinary bankers, whose methods have not netted them the large fortune that I. W. Hellman possesses, though he displayed a lack of diplomacy in suggesting such a scheme even in secret.

The knocks that members of the committee of forty are trying to pass out against I. W. Hellman Jr. are not at all becoming to such distinguished citizens. They are commenting upon his pride, as though a man could have anything more estimable than pride. When it was proposed to establish a municipal pawnshop, some member of the committee of forty suggested young Hellman as the ideal man to run it. The words were no sooner out of the mouth of the suggestor than Mr. Hellman remarked that he not only refused the proffered place but that he regarded the suggestion as an insult. The others present refused to view the matter in that light.

After a bit the place was offered to Babcock of the Bank of California, but he also declined. Finally Frank G. Drum, who represents the Haggard and Tevis interests, was selected for the job, and he very wisely accepted. On account of these few incidents some of our bankers, I am sorry to narrate, are knocking the Hellmans, father and son.

The first story of the disaster of San Francisco was sent out by John P. Barrett, news editor of the Examiner. When his dispatch reached the office of the New York Journal and American, the editors there could hardly realize that it was true, as none of the big news agencies, like the Associated Press, the Scripps-McRae people or others, carried even a hint that anything unusual had occurred at this end of the world.

This was due to the fact that their telegraph operators were paralyzed by the shock, and when they sufficiently recovered to do any work they had lost all the wires east. While they wondered what else was going to happen, Barrett was sending his story, with the assistance of Al Baum, who has charge of the Examiner leased wire.

Barrett's story was printed all over the world before the other papers got anything east of Oakland. In Paris it bore the first news of the disaster to Jere Lynch, to Joseph D. Grant, and other Californians quartered there. The London Mail devoted a column of editorial in eulogy of the great scoop. The Hearst news service sold the story everywhere. So widely was the beat discussed by continental journalists, that all sorts of stories were circulated about the fate of Barrett, most of them dealing with the dramatic manner of his supposed death.

Here is a verbatim translation of the article that appeared in the Västra Finland of May 8, under the caption "Died at His Post":

"The first circumstantial explanation of the catastrophe in San Francisco was telegraphed to the New York Journal by that newspaper's correspondent, J. P. Barrett, who also was a prominent co-worker with the mammoth Examiner of San Francisco. Immediately after the calamity he sent to his paper a telegram of one thousand words, which he took down in the Examiner office, which was situated in the newspaper's building, a skyscraper of twenty stories, in close proximity to the two other skyscrapers belonging to the Call and the Chronicle.

"Here Mr. Barrett was sitting Wednesday morning when he worked out his graphic story. The dispatch was immediately upon its arrival in New York printed in an extra edition of the New York Journal, after which a special correspondent for a London newspaper cabled it to London in its entirety. There it was published at five o'clock Thursday morning, sixteen hours after the catastrophe took place. From New York now comes the sad news that Mr. Barrett, in all probability, has become a victim of the catastrophe which he so excellently described. Mr. Barrett's first telegram, which commenced with these words, 'I write this dispatch among heaps of brick and mortar that surround the unhappy telegraph operators,' closes as follows: 'Already the editorial rooms in the building are in flames. The Examiner building, where I sit writing, cannot long escape the sea of flames which surround us on all sides.' Shortly afterward a new telegram was received from Barrett. It was quite short, and began with the words: 'I think this dispatch will be my last,' and closes short in the next sentence.

"Since then nothing has been heard of him, and his death is considered beyond doubt, as his successor has already been appointed on the paper. It is known, however, that he remained until the last at his post by the telegraph apparatus in the Examiner office, which the flames stormed from all sides. He now most likely lies buried under the ruins of the Examiner's skyscraper.

"Mr. Barrett, who was quite a young man, was considered one of America's most brilliant journalists."

Not bad for a Finnish paper. Mr. Barrett, however, refuses to live up to the thrilling account of his death, as he inclines to the theory that a live news editor is better than a dead journalist, even if he died at his post instead of passing, as did Thomas Hickey, "asleep at the switch."

The turning down of Abe Ruef's county committee by the Republican State Central Committee was quite a blow to that wily politician, because of the effect the act may have on the gubernatorial situation.

When Schmitz practically declared himself out of the running as a candidate to succeed Pardue, it was generally understood that Ruef planned to throw his entire strength to "Black" Hayes, who, next to the mayor, holds the warmest spot in his political heart.

All this is, of course, water on Pardue's wheel, for with Schmitz being satisfied to succeed himself as mayor and Ruef's power to aid Hayes weakened, Pardue's grip on the nomination to succeed himself as the Republican candidate is stronger than ever. And the way things look it seems like a cinch for the Republican candidate.

The Democrats are, as usual, doing a lot of windjamming, but it doesn't look as though they have a chance to get out of the breeze stage. So bitter are the feuds in the ranks of the Democracy, resulting from the combinations of Gavin McNab, during the stretch of years he controlled the party and led it to glorious defeat, that it is impossible to strike anything like a harmonious note in a gathering of more than one Democrat.

If you mention the name of Tim Spellacy as a likely candidate for governor on the Democratic ticket, Mike Tarpey immediately ceases making wine and money, and goes in search of a fine old hammer. If you mention Tarpey's name as the Moses to lead the followers of Thomas Jefferson out of the wilderness, every friend of Gavin McNab, from Siskiyou to San Diego and from Grass Valley to Emeryville, starts an anvil chorus of his own.

To even suggest the late Franklin K. Lane is to make everybody with the faintest sense of humor this side of Canada laugh out loud. Of course, Jim Budd has been a dead one so long that half the Democrats who voted for him in the dim and distant past wouldn't know who he is. Isidor Dockweiler, the champion breeder of Los Angeles, is merely a joke without a laugh, and James D. Phelan lost too much money in the big fire to seriously think of re-entering politics. It only cost him $40,000 to be elected mayor of San Francisco the last time he ran, and since then he has been compelled to put up for an army of dead ones in order to appease the few of his followers who have been dining at the tax-eaters trough.

Possibly a good hot-air artist might get hold of Warren English and give him the balloon treatment sufficiently to make him arise to the occasion. But I doubt it. From a recent conversation I had with Francis J. Heney, I am convinced that he got all of the practical politics he wants just before last election day. Judge William P. Lawlor, who at one time had lofty political ambitions, couldn't be made to take the gubernatorial nomination, because he knows the labor people have sworn to knife him the next time he seeks a public favor. Fire Commissioner John J. Barrett is making too much money practicing law to bother about looking for an elective office, and Judge Coffey is wedded to the superior bench forever and aye. The only person that I can think of that would make an acceptable Democratic candidate for governor is a man who has been gifted by God with a wonderous mind, but which, I regret to say, he has not put to proper use—a man who at one time could have had almost anything within the giving of the people—I refer, fellow Democrats, to that one time great and glorious but now somewhat benighted gentleman, George D. Collins (postoffice address, Box 23, San Quentin).

In the political garden of dear old 'Frisco there have bloomed roses and rosettes of various hues and eminent distinctions, but never in that wondrous field of blossoms has there blown a rosette in the same class with Supervisor Thomas Lonergan. Were I a racing reporter I might designate this peculiar type of rosette with impunity, but as I am a scurvy person, dealing mostly with men whose breeding does not class with that of first-class horses, it does not meet that I dub him in the delicacy of his variety. What the peacock is to the bat the Lonergan type of rosette is to the common or garden variety; it is a specie without heritage, and let us pray that it will leave no posterity.

The literati of modern France would describe it as a prose poem. Whistler would have reproduced it with one masterful dash of color; had it blown in the time of Keats it would have been immortalized in a perfect sonnet, but in these base and sordid times it cannot even attain the dignity of preceding a bobtail car.

But why eulogize Lonergan when the plain unvarnished tale of his daily doings is more eloquent than a hand shake from Frank Jordan.

Whenever any of the lads or lassies of the line meet Tom, their form of greeting is as follows: "Tom, what's your first name, anyway?"

Then Tom extends his near gloved hand, and replies in his most coquettish manner: "Ah, go way wid you, go way wid you! Pardon the glove, please; pardon the glove, for bechune you an' me since I have been runnin' wid that devil Coffey, the supervisor, sorrah a bit of me can walk in the wind widout me gloves. Ah, it's different now from the cold winter mornings whin I was driven a hot cakes wagon. In them days I was satisfied wid a cup of coffee an' a bit of pie, but now the devil a bit of me can go to sleep after a whirl wid the bies until I have tickled up me palate and warmed me belly wid a quart of rale Frinch champagne. I tell you there's no such delightful feelin' in this wor-r-ld as the slippin' of the bubbles of the grape down a dry throat. Whin I drinks rale Frinch champagne I wish me neck wur as long as the neck of a giraffe. I don't think I can iver go back to the steam drawn sharp an' cold as they used to draw it at Benham's place on Taylor street."

Then the members of the gang say, "Lonergan, what's your last name, anyway?"

"Ah, go way wid you," replies Tom. "Ask Pat Calhoun, he knows me backwards. Say, did ye hear of the flat I've bought since I became a supervisor? Well, whin I wur bur-r-r-ed out I wint right off and paid a wad of money fur a flat that a horse couldn't jump over."

"It would take a fast horse to jump over a flat, Tom," replies the member of the gang.

"Ah, go way wid you," answers Lonergan. "I didn't mane the horse couldn't jump over me flat. I mane he couldn't jump over the bank roll I have. An' whin you have a bank roll you can ate Frinch dinners three times a day like I do."

And so he rambles on, buying all the while, for since his election he hasn't lost his fine old thirst. He has simply intensified it, and has acquired the knack of drinking champagne without sneezing, which no other member of the board can do, save Pat McGushen.

HALE BROS., Inc.
Eleventh and Washington Streets, Oakland

OAKLAND
STOCKTON

Commencing Monday, June Eighteenth,

HALE BROS. will sell Salinger's entire stock --- $150,000 worth of merchandise will be sacrificed

In order to effect a quick clearance and make room for a large shipment of merchandise already in transit, Salinger's goods must make room for HALE'S GOODS. They cannot be allowed to remain --- nor can their sale drag along indefinitely. The Hale policy is to close out everything in its season, therefore the Salinger goods must go --- now. Every department will be represented in this sale. Hundreds of lines will be placed on the bargain tables and counters, marked in plain figures and properly ticketed so that you can see exactly what LOW PRICES HAVE BEEN PLACED UPON EVERYTHING IN THE HOUSE. There are so many lines it is practically impossible to put them all on sale at one time, but as soon as one line is gone another will take its place. Extra salespeople, wrappers, cashiers and delivery people have been engaged to make shopping as easy and convenient as possible. Early morning shopping will be found the easiest.

UNBELIEVERS ARE DOOMED

The Faithful Hurrying to Benton Harbor, Which Is to Be Spared.

LONDON, June 16.—Fearing the destruction of the whole earth, except Benton Harbor, Mich., a party of the "Sons of David" or "New Israelites" is on its way from London to that favored spot.

Benton Harbor being the headquarters of the sect, the "Sons of David" are hurrying thither to escape the cataclysm they believe will overtake the rest of the world, and which they say has already begun at San Francisco and Vesuvius. Their seers have told them that England will be the next to suffer.

As for Benton Harbor, Mich. with its industrial colony of 300 Sons of David, it is to become a new Eden, inhabited only by the sinless remnant of the earth's millions—the New Israelites.

ENGLAND FIGHTS FOR MILLIONS

CAIRO, Egypt June 16.—An action to recover $30,000,000 from the Egyptian government brought by the khedivial prince heirs to the late Khedive Ismail, is occupying the attention of the mixed tribunal here, and arousing much interest.

The vast sum involved is the surplus realized on the sale of certain lands which the khedive surrendered in 1878 for the benefit of his creditors. The claim is being contested by the government on the advice of Lord Cromer, the all-powerful British agent in Egypt.

The government has retained the money on the ground that since Ismail bought the land with state money, the results of the sale should belong to the state, while the prince's counsel argues that the khedive then like Louis XVI. was the state and that the money should descend to his heirs.

TRIED FOR SELLING BOTTLES OF BEER

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—George Braun, who conducts a saloon at the corner of Pine and Illinois streets, was held before Police Judge Cabaniss this morning and charged with selling liquor without a license. He pleaded not guilty. The defendant is accused of having sold bottled beer. His defense is that under the present law he is entitled to sell liquor by bulk.

ROMANCE OF MILLIONAIRE

J. J. Hill, the Railroad Man, Married Poor Girl He Had Educated.

The presence of Mrs J. J. Hill of St Paul, wife of the famous president of the Great Northern railway and the head of its vast collateral interests, including one of the finest steamship lines in the world and a system of gigantic elevators, etc., calls to mind the romantic history of the couple, whose domestic life is one of unalloyed happiness, says H. K. Wilbur of Winona. Their mansion on St Anthony's hill in St Paul is one of the most complete and beautiful in America. It cost, as it stands several millions and it is a veritable art treasury, as well as a home, for Mr Hill is an art connoisseur of no mean standing, and his investments in paintings alone run up close to the $100,000 mark. I am informed.

"When Jim Hill was a young fellow employed about the docks of the Diamond Jo line of Mississippi steamers at St Paul, he saw among the girls at the hotel where he was employed an Irish damsel of winning manners, but Irish so dignified and womanly that he was at once attracted to her. He made her acquaintance, and became more than ever impressed with her character and worth. The same far-sightedness which has ever been the great railroader's characteristic stood in good stead now. He saw in this poor girl the woman who was to be his wife when all his great ambitions were realized and he had made the mark in the world his innate genius assured him he would. To make a long story short, a story that men and women never tire of repeating or having repeated to them, young Hill wooed and won the shy and quiet maiden.

"Here again his great reserve power—his masterful ability to labor and to wait—was seen. He did not hasten to hymen's altar. He was to be a rich man, a man of position and power and a wife of such a man must needs be fitted for the duties and responsibilities her place in life demanded. So he arranged for the education of his intended, and all the doors of opportunity which poverty had rudely closed against the bright and true young woman were swung wide open and with the greed of a hungry mind shut out for years from the feast of knowledge, the young waiter girl absorbed the good things set before her, and in the years spent in the schools and institutions of learning became a cultivated, self-possessed, broadly educated woman, trained for the duties of wifehood and motherhood and fitted to fill with grace the high place which her lover was rapidly making for her.

"Jim Hill had made no mistake and when the school days were over and their lives were joined he found in his heart's queen a perfect helmet and complement, and in all the years of his growing successes Mr Hill has leaned upon and deferred to the judgment of the Irish waiter girl he learned to love so many years ago, and she has never failed to respond to the calls to the highest duty or to do honor in the most trying circumstances to the man who, early in her career and his, discovered her intrinsic worth and splendid possibilities."

"YANKEE" BASEBALL INVADES ENGLAND

LONDON, June 9.—The first baseball game under the auspices of the British Baseball association has been played at Plumstead, London between teams representing London and Oxford universities.

As the latter were all American Rhodes scholars, they naturally had it all their own way, defeating the English novices by nineteen runs to seven. About two thousand spectators followed the "Yankee game" curiously, most of them armed with books of rules in order to understand the innovation.

Fair progress is being made in acclimating baseball in England several of the leading football clubs like Woolwich Arsenal and Tottenham Hotspur having formed teams to train in the American game during the summer.

But cricket, though it is often slow and wearisomely drawn out, remains the national summer game, and is hardly likely to be ousted by baseball yet awhile.

READS NEWSPAPER BY SAUSAGE-LIGHT

PRAGUE, Bohemia, June 16.—In the excursions along the queer bypaths of science, Professor Hans Molisch, of Prague, has just discovered that meat very often contains a light-giving microbe—a kind of bacteriological glow-worm. He has even read a newspaper by the light shed by a beef sausage.

Professor Molisch states that 52 per cent of beef and 50 per cent of veal joints harbor the light microbe, whose beans are of a greenish white. The microbe, contrary to what might be expected, is not symptom of decomposition, and has never been found in meat which is "high."

It would appear that the microbe flourishes best in fat meat, as the light disappeared when the fat on the luscious sausage was scraped away, but again shone forth as the interior fat began to ooze to the surface.

SMALL FIRE IN SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO, June 16.—Embers smoldering underneath the livery barn of L. Marcell 35 Broadway, was responsible for a small blaze last night which was distinguished without loss.

RESCUED CHILD, THEN LOST HEAD

PHILADELPHIA, June 16.—Perfectly cool while he was rescuing a seven-year-old boy from a burning tenement house yesterday morning, Isaac Betharski lost his head when the danger affected only himself and jumped from a third-story window.

The fire was at 228 Lombard street, the first floor of which is occupied as a children's clothing factory. Mr. Greenberg, who lives in two rooms on the second floor. On the second and third stories of the building the families live. While Greenberg was cooking breakfast his gasoline stove exploded and the place immediately on fire. Betharski, who had been wrapped in a blanket and ran to the third story to rescue the children when he was there.

He lowered the boy to a man who stood on an ironing board to receive him, but the boy fell and cut his head.

When he first arrived he had a bad headache. He lost much of his temporary hair, but was able to replace his slate-colored hair.

His table is now always surrounded by an interested crowd.

getting the children out of the building, came out just as Betharski jumped. He caught the man and then fell to, severing the pavement, but neither was hurt. It was a typical accident of boyhood and doubtless saved Betharski's life.

"My Cake is Dough" Did not use Sperry's Flour

SCHWAB PLUNGE
AT MONTE CARLO

LONDON, June 16.—The Express prints a dispatch from Nice saying that Charles M. Schwab is causing a sensation at Monte Carlo by his high play at roulette. According to the story, Mr. Schwab paid the maximum on all bets and transversals. On one occasion he won $10,000 by this method.

When he first arrived he had a bad headache. He lost much of his temporary hair, but was able to replace his slate-colored hair.

His table is now always surrounded by an interested crowd.

WORE NIGHTSHIRT AT THEIR PARTY

ST. LOUIS, June 16.—What happened the night before Christmas impelled Mrs. Stella V. Wilson, wife of John T. Wilson, grand president of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees to sue for a divorce. She told Judge Douglas that this is what happened.

Mr. Wilson appeared at a Christmas eve party at their home, clad only in his night shirt and sat in the parlor all evening dressed that way in the company of young men and women.

"How long was the nightshirt?" asked the court.

"Well, it hit him about the knees when he sat down and that was all he wore. When I afterward remonstrated with him he told me there wasn't anything wrong about it, that it was just natural."

Examinations for County Schools Gratifying in Result.

NAPA. June 16.—The largest and most enthusiastic convention yet held by the counties committees of the California Promotion Committee is in session here today. More than one hundred delegates, representing organizations in all parts of California, are present, and the addresses all show increased interest in the movement to place the state well before the world.

The Napa Chamber of Commerce has arranged a program of entertainment which will occupy the time of the delegates whenever they are away from the work of the convention. At noon today the ladies of the New Century Club entertained the delegates at luncheon in Armory hall, and immediately adjourned to the Napa Chamber of Commerce to take the delegates to the Napa Soda Springs, where a dinner will be given. This will be followed on the return to town by a reception. Tomorrow a special train will carry the delegates to the upper end of the valley, where will be held the meetings of the Chamber of Commerce of Calistoga and the Board of Trade of St. Helena.

MANY PRESENT.

Governor George C. Pardee, Lieutenant-Governor John C. Treado, A. A. Treado, president of the California Miners' Association, and many other prominent men of affairs of the state are present. Chairman A. Sharbor called the meeting to order shortly after 10 o'clock, and the convention immediately got down to work in its usual expedition.

GOVERNOR SPEAKS.

Governor George C. Pardee said in part:

"I hope it has been born in on the mind of every person in California that the great disaster to San Francisco and its vicinity is a great disaster to the state, no matter whether it or not it suffered any direct loss from this great catastrophe, has indirectly lost by reason of the destruction of property around the Bay of San Francisco."

"The metropolis was, directly or indirectly, affected in one way or another, with every other part of the state. The banks and commercial houses of the great city did business, directly or indirectly, with every city, town and hamlet of California. The farmers produced the ordinary fruits, vegetables, wine, grapes and raisins, the products of our mines, the cattlemen's beef, the sheepsmen's mutton and wool, the lumbermen's boards, and timbers—all, in short, that California produces, was, in one way or another, related to its prices and profitable production upon the ordinary activities of the nearly half-million people, who, two months ago, were living in comfort, prosperity and happiness in cities that were so heavily visited on April 18 and the following three days."

DEMANDS FOR MATERIAL.

"It is true that the destruction of all this property will, temporarily, make great demands for the raw material needed to replace them. It is true that, in order to rebuild the stricken cities, there will be great demands for materials with which to do it. It is also true that labor will be in great demand for the same purpose. But, on the other hand, nearly one-quarter of the whole population of this state has had visited upon it a great calamity, one which has destroyed a considerable portion of the state's wealth, one which has dealt a heavy blow to many of the state's industries, one which, if not properly handled, will lead to the financial embarrassment, even the bankruptcy, of many of the state's people."

MRS. R. A. BRAY

MISS MARGARET KNOX

MISS HELEN de YOUNG

A RECITAL.

The home of Miss Gladys Powell was a pretty scene of dainty little folks, last Thursday afternoon, the occasion being an informal recital given by Miss Powell's piano pupils. A very creditable program was highly appreciated by the parents, and musical games were enjoyed by the children.

J. J. J.

Those participating in the program were Misses Loretta Roebke, Beulah Rohr, Theora Bookhout, Alice Hewson, Veda Wenk, Lillian Marr, Elisabeth Cook, Gladys Powell, Zelma Powell and Master Fulton Hewson.

J. J. J.

HAS RETURNED.

Miss Charlotte Thomas has returned after a delightful stay in Los Gatos, where she was the guest of friends.

J. J. J.

LUNCHEON GUESTS.

Miss Adele Scott, the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Scott, entertained half a dozen friends Friday afternoon at a luncheon and lawn party given at her home in East Oakland.

J. J. J.

CAFE CHANTANT.

Tomorrow night the cafe chantant will be held at the MacDermot home, rain or shine. So declare the ladies interested in the fete.

Owing to the rain Friday, the affair, which had been scheduled for that evening, had to be postponed, and consequently caused quite a little disappointment to all concerned, as the evening had promised to be more than successful. The grounds were beautifully decorated, and judging by the number of tickets sold, the attendance would have been very large.

But all this has tended to encourage the ladies to greater efforts for the success of Monday night.

J. J. J.

WERE ENTERTAINED.

Edward B. Adams and wife, for two seasons light comedian and prima donna soprano respectively of Hill's "Gay New York" musical comedy company, an eastern organization that canceled its coast bookings owing to the conflagration in San Francisco, are visiting relatives and friends in Oakland and San Francisco. They were entertained at dinner last evening by Robert E. Gelstich.

Mr. Adams, who is a Californian by birth, has appeared here on numerous occasions during the past decade with large theatrical companies. Mrs. Adams, who is known behind the footlights as "Lillian Hoerlein," is very popular with eastern theatergoers. This is her first visit to the Pacific Coast. The pair will leave shortly on an extended tour through the southern part of the state, returning thence to New York, there to remain until the opening of the season in that city.

J. J. J.

JUNE WEDDING.

One of the pretty June weddings was that of Miss Adeline R. Kohler of San Francisco and Richard J. Garrett of Berkeley. Dr. F. X. Morrison officiated in the presence of a small company of friends at St. Joseph's church, Berkeley.

The bride wore a pretty gown of white and carried a bouquet of white roses.

Both young people have a large circle of friends. After a honeymoon trip they will make their home in Berkeley.

J. J. J.

AT COUNTRY HOME.

Mr. and Mrs. William Sherwood, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred E. Chapman and Mrs. Robert Sherwood will leave Oakland for Belvedere the first of July. The Sherwoods have engaged Mrs. Morgan's home, "Castle Crest," for the summer.

J. J. J.

AN AUTO TRIP.

A very pleasant day was spent last Saturday on a trip to Palo Alto and a visit to the ruins of the university. Among those who enjoyed the trip were: Miss Ray Denker, Jack Weiland, Claudine Jones, Frank O'Neill, Marie Magnin, Albert Stone, Jeanette Jones, Lester Smith, Currie Madison and Carl Drossner, the host.

J. J. J.

AT LUNCHEON.

Miss Rosalind Magne will be the honored guest of the Misses Claudine Jones and Myriam Elsasser at a luncheon to be given at the Piedmont club house in the near future.

J. J. J.

SOCIETY NOTES.

The Stanley Jacksons are at Napa Soda Springs.

The Benjamin Bakewells have settled at Santa Barbara, where they are to make their home for some time.

Ensign Arthur G. Coffey of the U. S. S. Boston and Mrs. Coffey will be at Mare Island for a couple of weeks. Mrs. Coffey was Miss Mayotte Dickinson before her marriage, which took place three weeks ago in this city.

Dr. and Mrs. Dwight Chipman, who spent several weeks in this city after the fire, have moved into their Ross Valley home, which was not completed at the time they were burned out of their apartments in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy McCabe are enjoying several lengthy trips in their auto car. They visited Byron Springs last week.

Miss Grace Dawson was hostess Friday evening at a very informal affair given at her attractive home. The complimented guest was Miss Florence White, who leaves shortly for the east.

Among those present were Miss White, Miss Clara Dabney, Dr. George McChesney, Will Gardner, Charles Wiggin, Mr. and Mrs. John Smith.

Mrs. Blake-Alverson celebrated her seventieth birthday last Tuesday, and a host of friends visited the singer during the day, and letters and telegrams brought offerings of affection from friends in other cities.

During the afternoon Mrs. Alverson was visited by the ladies of Lyon Relief corps who presented her with a cut-glass vase filled with beautiful carnations.

A very happy day was spent by the hostess with her friends, relatives and pupils.

J. J. J.

SUMMER WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Martha Coffin and Alpheus Barton will probably take place late in the summer. The ceremony will be a quiet affair instead of the elaborate ceremony originally planned.

The wedding list will include only relatives and close friends.

J. J. J.

CLOSING EXERCISES.

The closing exercises of Miss Hambleton's private school on Oak street took place Thursday afternoon. The room was decorated with greens and flowers and the school colors, pink and blue. After the program refreshments were served.

Diplomas were awarded to Miss Ethel Hansen and Miss Bertha Goldberg.

J. J. J.

EASTERN WEDDING.

Miss Harriet Taylor, chaperoned by Librarian and Mrs. Charles S. Greene, left on Friday morning for Chicago, where, at a quiet service performed at the home of Rev. F. N. White, pastor of the Union Park Congregational church of Chicago, and brother of Mrs. H. R. Jones of this city, she will on Monday become the bride of Oscar C. Taylor of Garrett, Indiana.

Upon her arrival in Chicago she will be met by Mr. Taylor. The wedding costume is of dainty white, with a pretty white hat of roses and lace. A shower of white blossoms will remind the young bride of her Oakland home.

After a brief honeymoon Mr. Taylor and and his wife will reside in Garrett.

Miss Taylor is an Oakland girl and has been immensely popular. She is a sister of Miss Rose M. Taylor, secretary of the First Congregational church, and herself has been the attractive assistant in the children's room at the library. She is a gifted girl of fine musical ability.

Some four years ago, when Miss Taylor was a guest of relatives in Indianapolis, she met Mr. Taylor, and the friendship formed then has deepened, and the young eastern man has won the California girl for his bride.

Mr. Taylor is a prominent business man of Garrett, being the manager of the Central Union Telephone company. There will be hosts of friends to welcome his wife to her new eastern home.

AT THE HOTELS.

The party of German Counts, Carl Arg. Weber, Graf von Bismarck-Bohlen, Graf von Armin and Foh Brockmann, of Berlin, have gone to the Yosemite. After a few days' stay in the famous valley they will return for a week's sightseeing in the city. The party arrived from the Orient by the northern route and came out of its way to view the ruins in San Francisco.

Mrs. H. A. Tubbs of San Francisco is registered at the Hotel Athens.

Max Peyer, Berlin, Germany, is at the Tournide.

Mrs. J. H. Kuhne and children of Tonopah are at the Hotel Crellin for a few days.

Ada F. Davidson, Spokane, Wash., registered at the Crellin, is touring the state.

W. T. Lenz, H. G. Mitchel, J. W. Bate and W. Mitchell Lenz form a party of Racine, Wis., people in the city viewing the ruins. They are staying at the Hotel Athens.

Mrs. A. N. Armstrong and Mrs. J. L. Widmer of Los Angeles, at the Crellin, are in town for a few days.

Commander John S. Parker and Mrs. Parker are at the Athens.

H. B. Shackford, business man of Cincinnati, Ohio, is registered at the Hotel Crellin.

Mrs. Molle Mathen is the guest of Mrs. B. C. Clark at the Tuba mine, near Oroville. Last Monday evening this popular Oakland girl was the guest of honor at an informal affair given by her hostess, Mrs. Clark.

THE PASSING SHOW

IDORA PARK.

"The Mascot" has proved a veritable "mascot" to Idora Park, for every performance has been crowded and the audiences have been more than delighted with the excellent performance. Hope Mayne, in the role of Bettina, has made herself a prime favorite with the patrons of the park, and Arthur Cunningham has never done anything better than the part of Pippo. Sybil Page, the Princess Flaminetta, had but little opportunity to show her magnificent voice, but in the next opera, "Olivette," will have far greater chances, for she will sing the role of the Countess in that opera and has some beautiful solo numbers in her score. Joseph Fogarty does excellent work as Farmer Rocco and the smaller parts are all both sung and acted well. Ferris Hartman seems to have found the elixir of youth, for never in the palmy days of the old Tivoli did he work harder and achieve more satisfactory results, and as a stage director he is simply unequalled.

The excellent orchestra under Paul Steinford is alone worth going to hear.

"The Mascot" will be continued one more week, when it will give place to that very funny work with most charming music, "Olivette."

Hope Mayne will appear in the title role and the cast will be up to the full strength of the company. It will indeed be refreshing to again hear the jolly "Torpedo and the Whale," "When Balmy Garlic Scents the Air," "The Paradise" and the other many beautiful numbers with which this opera is replete and which we have not heard for many years.

The open-air skating rink is attracting enormous crowds and every one remarks on the splendid conveniences and the courteous attention of Superintendent Pilling's forces.

The Hale's Tour is proving a very attractive feature and the car is crowded with passengers every trip.

Manager Bishop has gone East and some interesting announcements concerning the plans of both Idora Park and Ye Liberty Playhouse will be awaited with interest.

Impresario Will Greenbaum, who is the acting manager of Idora Park, will also continue bringing high-class companies and attractions to California. Among good things he promises for the winter season are Sembach, Schumann-Heink, Rosenthal, the pianist, two important bands, the Burton Holmes Travellouges and others.

OAKLAND GIRLS AT LIBERTY.

Katherine Grey, who is about to open a starring engagement at Ye Liberty Playhouse on June 25, is an Oakland girl, having been born and raised and educated in this city. Miss Grey's last appearance on this coast was at the G- and Opera House in San Francisco, where she played a starring engagement at that theater.

Miss Grey comes direct from the Empire Theater, Boston, where she played in "The Last Appeal," an original production, in which she won immense praise, due to her excellent acting and interpretation of the part of Melitta Rendt in that play. She also won great praise as Mrs. Dane in "Mrs. Dane's Defense," in which John Craig (our popular leading man, who was recently at the Alcazar, San Francisco), was the leading man. Mr. Bishop is congratulated on getting such an excellent actress as Miss Grey, who is as well known in this city as Nance O'Neill, also an Oakland girl.

Miss Grey will appear as Esther in "Mizpah," a play that all of us remember as being the greatest show ever produced on this coast. Mr. Underwood will act as her leading man during her short season at Ye Liberty.

THE MACDONOUGH.

The Elieford Company will present tomorrow (Monday) night and all the week will Will R. Robert's melodramatic story of a great city, "A Human Slave," which is one of the most powerful and thrilling stories ever produced on a stage and a forcible illustration of the oppression and misery which the mighty corporations and trusts inflict on their wretched workmen and women whose slavery amasses their billions. "A Human Slave" will be elaborately and realistically produced and among the chief effects will be a strike of the steel workers and the interior of a steel mill in full operation. In this latter scene the enraged factory hands seize their villainous employer and place him on the huge revolving wheel of the machine, from which he is saved from death in the nick of time by his bitter enemy, the hero, who claims that his life belongs to him. The following will be the cast:

president of the Stockton Iron Company, Lloyd Edwards; Melvin Thornton, vice-president of the Stockton Iron Company, George F. Webster; Hugh Berry, a clerk in the office of the Iron Company, William R. Abram; Dr. Stepleton, a kind-hearted physician; Frank Wyman; Sleekers, George Hernandez; Giovanni, an Italian padrone; Jim Corrigan; Cruell, a mill worker; Jason Powers; Switchell, a tool of Thornton's; Wallace Howe; Officer Deane, William Dau; Slack, James Dunbar; Mildred Stockton, the right-hand owner of the mill; Metta Chamberlain; June Prentice, Alpha Getrude Clark; Toby, a mill girl; Mattie Lloyd Luce; The marvelously clever mates of children, Sophie and Gordon Osborne, who have created such a furor in their German dialect imitations and clever songs and dances, have been re-engaged and will appear all next week in entirely new specialties. "The Red Cross Nurse" will be performed for the last times at today's matinee and tonight. The summer popular prices, evening, 10, 20 and 30 cents and Saturday and Sunday matinees, 10 and 20 cents, are still in force.

SYMPHONY CONCERT.

The "Unfinished Symphony" of Schubert has been announced as the chief feature of the first symphony concert of the summer season, to be given in the Greek Theater at Berkeley by the University Orchestra at half past three o'clock on Thursday afternoon, June 25. There will be two movements of the symphony—an allegro moderato and an andante con moto.

In order that the symphony audience may have an opportunity to acquaint itself with the program in advance of the concert, the university has now announced that the program for June 25 will begin with the overture to Mozart's opera "Don Juan," the symphony will follow, then will come the overture to "Fidelio," by Beethoven, then the celebrated "Dance Macabre," by Saint Saens, and the concert will close with a brilliant number by Brahms, the "Academic Festival Overture."

The University Orchestra, for this concert of June 25, as for the symphony concerts on July 12 and 26, will give entirely new programs, not repeating any of the music heard during the six concerts of last winter and spring.

The university feels gratified at the success with which Conductor Wolfe and Concertmaster Giulio Minetti are meeting in the preparations for the three symphony concerts that have been announced for June and July. In personnel and training the orchestra will be of the same high artistic standard established during the first season.

An unqualified success for these further concerts by the University Orchestra is confidently expected from the university's experience with the symphony concert given a few weeks after the San Francisco fire and the visit of Madame Sarah Bernhardt to play "Paeans" in the Greek Theater.

The friends of the university and the lovers of what is best in music and in the drama flocked by the thousands to the Greek Theater on both of these occasions, showing most strongly that this community is in nowise turned from its characteristic love of the arts by either disaster or the suppression of new cases.

That the university has announced these further symphony concerts is being much commented on as an evidence of the undaunted spirit of the

THE NOVELTY THEATER.

Manager Smith of the popular Novelty Theater has a gigantic program in store for the patrons of this favorite place of amusement next week.

Among the star artists who will be seen in Oakland for the first time will be Naida, the spectacular queen of the air and nymph of the sea, who comes to the Pacific coast as a big drawing card, said to be the best in her line in vaudeville. Madam Wanda and troupe of educated Dalmatians will be a feature of the entertainment and undoubtedly create as big a sensation here as she has elsewhere.

Professor Wayne, the wizard of illustrionists, direct from London and other European cities, will be seen here for the first time. Nevada Madam, imitator of famous actresses, will make his initial bow in this city. Good reports precede him and he will surely maintain the splendid reputation that precedes him. There will be a new illustrated singer in the person of V. R. McPherson, who is said to possess a marvelous voice, most suitable with picture slides and has met with great success and been warmly received wherever he has appeared. With two new sets of moving pictures, the program in its entirety will be a hard one to eclipse anywhere for the price of admission. The same one dime admission prevails—no increase in price to any part of the house. It must be remembered that the Novelty is the oldest and the leading vaudeville continuous show house in Oakland, where only gilt-edge artists appear.

BABY SAVED HIS FATHER

Went Before Judge and Plead That He Be Not Sent to Prison.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 16.—Lige Fuqua's baby saved him today from the penitentiary. He had pleaded guilty to stealing brasses from a railroad car. Lige's wife, with her two children, went to the office of the prosecuting attorney today and sat down with her infant in her arms waiting to speak to L. B. Kimbrell, prosecuting attorney. The other child, a girl of 4 years, went to the prosecuting attorney and stood before him, with her hands behind her back and looked up in his face.

"My papa is in jail," said the girl. Then the mother pleaded for mercy for her husband. When Fuqua was brought in Mr. Kimbrell said: "If you'll promise to go right to work and take care of your family, and never steal again, I'll do something I never did before for any man I've prosecuted. I shall ask the court to let you out on bond."

Lige promised, and was released.

AID FOR SICK INFANTS AT SEASIDE HOSPITAL

NEW YORK, June 16.—During the past week at the Seaside Hospital of St. John's Guild, New Jersey, Staten Island, many infants were admitted, especially those who had been artificially fed and would have succumbed to the hot weather. The mothers, too, have rejoiced to find the advantages of the hospital placed at their disposal earlier than usual, and have themselves been greatly benefited by the change.

With the prediction of a hot summer, the hospital will be taxed to its utmost until cool weather comes again. It is expected that persons who believe in good works will rally to the support of St. John's Guild throughout the heated season.

GLASGOW TOO BAD TO BE EVEN THOUGHT OF

NEW YORK, June 16.—The beauty of New York is almost a paradise in comparison with many sections of Glasgow, Scotland. I consider that the most wicked I have ever visited.

The Rev. James B. Curry, rector of St. James', who returned to New York yesterday on the steamship Celtic after an extensive study of moral and religious conditions in Great Britain, found his one worst spot in the Scottish city. "I have never in my life seen so many drunken men and dissolute women as one finds every day in almost every section of Glasgow," he said. "The depravity of that city is simply awful and horrible to even think of."

"WARNED BY SPIRITS," HUNTS FOR EXPLOSION

NEW YORK, June 16.—Believing as "spirits" had warned him that there would be an explosion between 1 and 4 o'clock in the morning in Manhattan, the Rev. A. Arthur Anderson of Bloomsburg, N. J., yesterday rode five hours in an automobile, looking for the catastrophe.

He hired the machine from the Gotham Automobile Company of 165 Broadway, at the rate of $6 an hour. At Chambers street and West Broadway the minister handed the chauffeur $6 and ran.

The chauffeur caught him, and Magistrate Moes later committed him to Bellevue Hospital for examination.

YONKERS MAN MISSING; FEARS OF FOUL PLAY

NEW YORK, June 16.—Joseph Shost disappeared from No. 64 Ash street, Yonkers, on Friday, and nothing has been heard of him. A general alarm has been sent out by the Westchester police. Shost's family fear he has met with foul play. He had nothing of value with him.

Shost has been employed for twenty-two years by the Alexander Smith Company, manufacturers of carpets, in Yonkers. He is forty-nine years of age, has gray hair, and a dark mustache, and when last seen he wore a gray suit and straw hat.

REAL ESTATE.

GEO. W. AUSTIN

SAYS NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY BUSINESS PROPERTY.

BRICK BUILDING—

$45,000—This cannot be equaled in Oakland at the price; solid brick block in the very heart of the business section, almost touching Broadway; 50 feet front, all in the very pink of condition, having a rental value of $400 and no leases whatever; 10 per cent on the property is a very rare investment. Drop in and ask about it. (1091)

WAREHOUSE—

$6000—Warehouse investment; furniture storage; corrugated iron building; any one can take in $100 per month storage from this property; a very desirable little business investment. (1419)

WESTER STREET—

Business lot 2 blocks from Broadway, with an excellent 8-room house, suitable for a home or renting; store could be built here, will bring a big return. (1403)

RENTED FLATS—

$5500—Dandy little pair of flats, all in fine condition; open plumbing, solid brick construction, high grade; these ought to be built up by stores; one could be built here with little expense; steadily rented now; close to 22nd and Grove; Key Route station; the land is worth $5000 and the building $2500—total $8500, discount for cash $2000—price now $5500. (386)

CLAY STREET—

INCOME $150 MONTHLY—

$2000—Leased under secured lease; downtown business lease, on sunny side of street, not far from Broadway, and altogether the best buy on the market today at the price; absolutely without any exception; never been offered for selling is that the owner has other interests to protect and must sell something. (113)

INCOME FLATS—

$7500—Nearly new flats downtown, can be remodeled into business property and made to pay about 15 per cent, few blocks from Broadway. (95)

MARKET STREET—

RESIDENCE LOT—

$1000—West side West st., that wide, prominent thoroughfare, near Agger st., and right between choice new dwellings; street will all done, stone, etc.; lot 15x100, the best residence lot in Oakland for the money. This is a fine site for flats and might be termed business property. (1)

NEW BUNGALOW—

Empty now, new 5-room bungalow, in nice part of East Oakland; porcelain bath, electric lights and high basement; keys at office; price $2500. (478)

CHEAP BUSINESS LOT—

$1250—Just off San Pablo ave.; good place for little store, adjoining lot is worth $5000, ought to double in value in a year. (1358)

INCOME BLOCK—

Business property; important cross street, near Webster st.; rents now for $500, worth $500 and the land alone is well worth $1500 and the buildings about $5000, price $16,000. (1313)

$45,000—It can sell a choice northwest corner within a couple of blocks of Broadway, 50x100 feet in size, this property includes the cost of remodeling the present 2-story buildings, making them 3-story, with stores below and flats above, and an excellent basement surrounded by a 12-foot solid brick wall; the total rental can be brought up to about $400 after this work is done at this rental; the investment will pay about 15 per cent per annum. (1468)

BROADWAY—

Under $800 per foot; Broadway near 20th st.; this is business property in the truest sense; there is no better buy in Oakland for a big future increase in value. (357)

TO 18 PER CENT—

$10,000—Will pay $1200 to $1800 a year; store and flat; rapidly improving block, close to Broadway; land alone well worth $7500 and the whole property will rent readily for $100 to $125 per month and possibly $150, will guarantee $100 per month; this little buy will give you a permanent independent income for life. (1285)

CLAY STREET—

FACTORY SITE—

INCOME FLATS—

$7500—Nearly new flats downtown, can be remodeled into business property and made to pay about 15 per cent, few blocks from Broadway. (95)

MARKET STREET—

At Kahn's

an ever changing panorama of the world's newest fashions

We give full sway to Old Dame Fashion—The evidence of the pre-eminence of style, the splendid gathering we show of the most original of the latest Fads and Fancies, makes Kahn's right now the fashion center of this section of California. Buyers have been rushed to the East to make selections and goods have been rushed back by express to make time. Novelties just beginning to be shown in New York are here on exhibit and for sale. Every department has enjoyed the good fortune of this splendid influx of merchandise, among them the Millinery section, the Lingerie and Underwear department, Silks, Dress Goods, Coats and Suits. As an example, among the newcomers in the latter department are:

The "Prince Chap" Suit
"Pony Jacket" Suit
The "College" Coat

The "Fritzy Scheff" Suit
The "Country Club" Waist
Princess Costumes

The "Peter Pan" Waist
Sunburst Skirts
The "London Eton"

The "Vanity" Suit
Pongee Auto Coats
The "Pocket" Waist

New Linen Suits
Parisians Lingerie Costumes
Khaki Divided Equestrian Skirts

Tourist Coats
Opera Coats
Louis XV. Garden Coats

The vogue for black and white effects has assumed vast proportions—Customers at every counter are choosing the various combinations of these two primary colors—Black and White Checks large enough to be classified as plaids, tiny shepherd checks, hair line and Pekin stripes are shown at the dress goods counters in a wonderful array.

The little children are wearing checked suits, with white stockings and little black shoes, and then they tip the combination off with a cute little white hat and black ribbons. Ladies are combining white linen suits with black patent leather shoes with white tops and black lace gloves and hat. Sometimes white laces are worn in black ties, while white shoes with black dresses are ultra swell. And Kahn's have all of these. So, do you wonder why we are doing such a magnificent business?

HERE ARE THE FASHIONABLE Silks

WHITE JAPANESE SILKS—The very thing for waists and summer garments. We've a beautiful line in all widths and qualities. The prices range like this.....
25c, 40c, 50c, 60c, 75c and $1.00 a yard

KAHNS' DEPENDABLE BLACK TAFFETA—This is the well-known grade that Kahn's guarantee. It is the silk that has done more to popularize our silk dept. than anything else. We have been selling the same grade for years and know it will give most excellent wear and perfect satisfaction.

19-inch ..... 75c yd. 27-inch ..... $1.00 yd.
36-inch ..... $1.25 yd.

BLACK CHIFFON TAFFETA—A beautiful silk and at present in great demand. The rich deep lustrous dye, coupled with the soft velvety weave, makes it an ideally fashionable silk. This silk is of exceptionally good quality.

19-inch ..... 75c yd. 27-inch ..... $1.00 yd.
36-inch ..... $1.50 yd.

MARIE ANTOINETTE SILK—One of the novelties. New York has gone wild over it and you'll have to see it, at least. Comes in white, light blue, old rose, etc. Queen's gray, hellu, reseda, etc. .... $1.00 yd.

THE NEW RADIUM SILK—An entirely new effect in all the latest and most effective evening shadings—44 inches wide. Quite different from anything you've seen..... $1.50 yd.

ROUGH FINISHED PONGEE—Will be worn, by those who can afford it, for summer costumes of all kinds. Comes in all the new shades and is full 27 inches wide. We have two grades..... 75c and $1.00 a yard.

LOUISINE STRIPED SILKS—The swell silk for waists and costumes—20 inches wide. Comes with white ground with black stripes. Gray ground with black stripes. White ground with black checks. Gray ground with black checks. .... 75c yard

LINING TAFFETA—We are pleased to announce a complete stock of all popular 50c lining taffeta. This is the 19-inch lining. Dressmakers will be pleased to know of its arrival. .... 50c yard

SOME OF THE VERY NEWEST Wash Fabrics

33-INCH OXFORDS—A fine heavy washable fabric for summer vacation wear. In black and white polka dots, stripes and checks..... 75c yd.

FLAKED LINEN—A pretty novelty, 38 inches wide, in white, blue, tan, gray, green and red flaked with white. Exceeding smart..... 25c yd.

NEW GALATEAS—A splendid fabric for summer dresses in a large range of patterns and color effects—You can not do better..... 15c yd.

PERCALES—Just as pretty as ever—nothing more serviceable—Light and dark effects in scores of styles 36 inches wide—Excellent values at..... 12½c yd.

SOME NEW LAWNS—Rosebud effects and polka dots are all the rage—We have them in great variety..... 10c, 12½c, and 15c yd.

NEW GINGHAMS—This is distinctively a gingham season. Never so popular before—and never so pretty either—Checks and plaids and stripes and plain effects galore—So why don't you plan a pretty little gingham dress?..... 10c and 12½c yd.

WHO BUYS YOUR HUSBAND'S FURNISHINGS? Does he buy them himself and pay a big price for everything, or do you buy them for him at Kahn's and pay Kahn's little prices? You can save $2 or $3 a month by getting his shirts, ties, collars, underwear, sox, etc. here.

HERE'S A LITTLE NEWS FROM Kahn's Splendid Suit Department

They're so busy in this section of the store that it's hard to get information. Nearly 100 people are kept busy in this department alone and goods are coming in and going out with such rapidity that great difficulty surrounds the procuring of news items of any nature.

The sale of Dollar Waists advertised for Friday and Saturday resulted in such a demand that we were almost entirely sold out by 3 P. M. Friday. As a consequence we were forced to put our $1.50 waists in at a dollar. This was the fastest sale of the kind we ever experienced and took us off our guard. However, no one was disappointed.

Yesterday morning we received by express a special shipment of 50-INCH PLAID WALKING COATS. These are the kind that reach almost to the instep. The plaids are the new invisible effects and are very neat—Single-breasted, fly front, or double breasted effects. ALL WOOL and beautifully made. We sold the first lot (3 weeks ago) for $1.00 and other folks asked $1.50. This lot (identically the same in all particulars) tomorrow ..... $7.95 each

We have concluded to place on sale 200 SHIRT WAISTS, all white, in the newest styles. These will be sold Monday for $1.50 each. On account of limited window space, we will be unable to display them, so you'll have to come to the suit section to see them. There isn't a waist in the lot worth less than $2, and some are worth more. As long as they last ..... $1.50 each.

Domestics, Beddings, Linens, Etc.

BED TICKING—Blue and white or fancy stripes—A big line just arrived ..... 10c to 25c yd.

HUCK TOWELS—Of cotton. Good weight and good value. A big shipment just in. For restaurants, etc. Good weight..... 60c doz.
Extra good weight..... $1.00 doz.

SOUVENIRS BY MAIL

We believe we have the finest souvenir album of "San Francisco, before and after the fire," that has been printed. The views include an accurate birds-eye view map of the city, showing the burned section, a panorama of the city in flames, another 29-inch panorama of the city after the fire and a third panorama, 29 inches long, of S. F. before the fire. The book contains 50 beautifully engraved pictures in all, about one-third of which show views before the fire. It also contains views from Santa Rosa, Palo Alto, Oakland, and San Jose, with an accurate and fair account of the disaster, giving statistics and figures that will be invaluable as historical facts.

This is the only book of the kind we have felt like advertising, but the work is such a beautiful one that we advise all our patrons to purchase at least one. It does S. F. justice, and we are proud to sell them.

The daughter of the president of the United States, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, is in London at the height of the season and the charming American girl is receiving all the honors that the king of Great Britain can shower upon her.

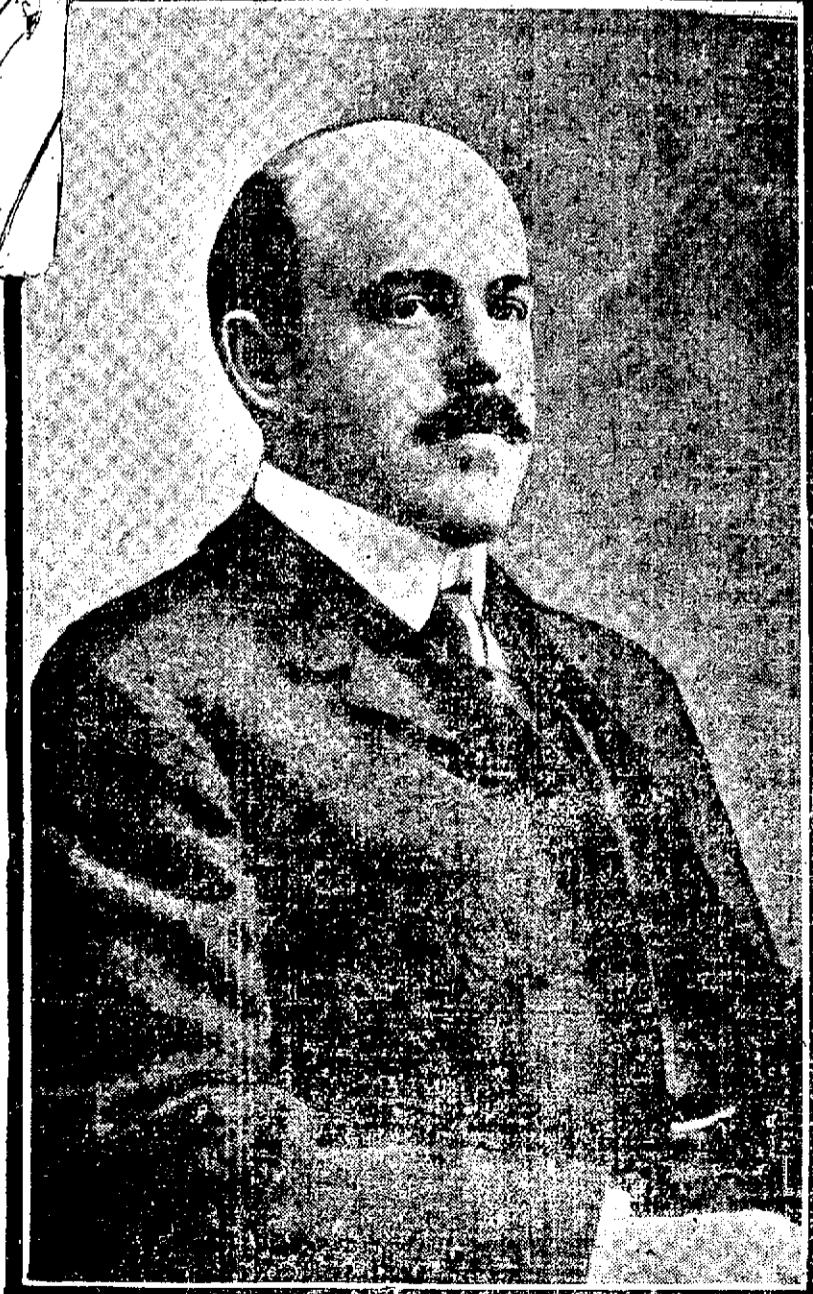

How was she received?

Nobody need be concerned about the answer. The king attended to that. Say what you will of Edward VII, he has tact. He does just the right thing at the right time and in the right place.

All this has already been attended to by his majesty himself, assisted by his impeccable secretary Lord Knollys. Mrs. Nicholas Longworth of Cincinnati, Ohio, had the time of her life—but quite unofficially, to be sure. All that royalty can do for royalty was done for her; but, mind you, strictly incog.

To begin with, London society was just itching to get a sight of the daughter of the president. Those who sit close to the throne imagine that Miss Roosevelt, as the daughter of the president, occupies something like the position of a crown princess. Furthermore, Mrs. Longworth is regarded as quite a remarkable young woman.

London likes to read about her exploits. More than one staid English journal sent a special correspondent over here just to report her wedding, and the British illustrated papers printed as much matter and as many pictures about it as did the American.

England compared her trip to the orient with that which is being made by the Prince and Princess of Wales, very much to Miss Roosevelt's advantage. The next king and his queen-to-be have bored England very much.

True, the British matron might have gasped when Miss Alice

ROLLER SKATING AGAIN.

SUDDEN REVIVAL OF THE REIGNING SPORT OF TWENTY YEARS AGO.

STATE IN THE
MONTHS

Another instance of the periodic return of society's fads is seen in the revival of roller skating. They say fashions and fancies repeat themselves every seven years, but it is three times seven since the American people, both young and old, spent their days and nights whirling on ball bearing discs and counted its time by the mornings, afternoon and evening sessions in the skating rink.

Oldtimers observe a difference between the skater of the former regime and the one of today. In some ways the difference is to the credit of the modern devotee of the rink. First of all, the twentieth skater looks much smarter on rollers. The women assume a correct and more graceful pose, possibly because the American woman of today stands better than she did two score years ago. Her boots are trimmer and her skirts hang perfectly around the bottom, and the modern American woman, whether she be in her teens or a grandmother, knows how to wear a short skirt as no other nation of women in the world does.

THEY LOOK SMARTER.

When you watch them gliding around with that easy, graceful motion, smartly and, above all, appropriately dressed, and with that sparkle in the eye and rosy tinge in the cheek that betoken both enjoyment and healthful exercise, you no longer wonder why roller skating is the present rage.

According to one of the oldtime skaters, who, by the way, is still young, for she was in the neighborhood of 10 when the country sang her praises for grace and cleverness on rollers, the roller skater of the new generation gets too much of the ice movement to make a good appearance when on the floor. She maintains that there should be less sign of exertion in roller skating than in ice, and even in straightway skating the motion should be a series of well connected curves, with only a very slight swaying of the body, in contrast to the ice skating movement, in which there is a very decided swing of the body with each stroke of the blade and a more pronounced lifting of the feet.

While the difference between a roller skater of the old school and the recent recruit from the ranks of the ice skater is less marked in straightway skating, it is more noticeable, so this former champion says, in fancy skating. In the figure eights, double threes, rolls and spins.

In fact, the arrangements being made at present for giving society a chance to enjoy the oldtime pastime lead one to believe that the roller skating fever, unlike most epidemics, is going to rage harder and longer than ever.

The new generation has never had a chance to skate in a rink. The taste they have had of straining along on an uneven street pavement or a rough sidewalk has not discouraged them, but rather made them all the more eager to try the sport at its best. Hence the rehabilitation of the old skating rink. Ice rinks are good fun and are immensely popular in New York, but they have their limitations.

One advantage of the roller rink is

It matters little to the average skater whether he shows the influence of afternoons spent on the ice or not. He or she wants to skate well enough to enjoy the sport, to keep on his feet and to be a good partner, and the average skater is far in the majority. For the others, those who like to learn fancy figures, the decision as to whether they will follow the old school or the new must rest with the individual.

As a health exercise roller skating has its defenders and its disapprovers. The general rule may be laid down that, provided you get no knocks and severe falls, the exercise is beneficial, on the whole. A hard fall may happen any time and anywhere, but it is more apt to happen to a person on roller skates, especially of that one is a novice. But barring this kind of a mishap, the general verdict by enthusiasts and doctors is that skating produces excellent results both in fat and thin.

One woman, who used to spend much of her time at the skating rink, ascribes her perfect health and magnificent physique to the exercise she got, from roller skating when a child. Ordinary skating is said to make the muscles of the shoulders, chest and legs firm. It keeps the blood circulating and brings the color to the face. Ankles are made stronger after a few weeks of skating, and those who lack grace of poise and carriage are improved in this direction in a surprisingly short time. You must know how to balance the body if you want to skate, and when you have acquired balance it is a short step to gracefulness.

ALL MUSCLES IN PLAY. There is not a muscle in the body that doesn't come into play when fancy skating is practiced. You are surprised to find how many muscles you have after you make a few attempts at fancy figures on rollers, and if the practice is continued new curves appear to enhance the beauty of th fair sex.

Some of them have country houses with rooms large enough for this particular kind of amusement; so, judging from the hold roller skating has taken upon some members of the smart set, it might almost be predicted that tennis and golf will have to share honors with the recently revived exercise.

Rink managers say that the new skating floors are superior to old ones and that skates are lighter and better made. The run sufficiently well to suit patrons who are still too young at the sport to care much whether rollers are made of boxwood, rubber or aluminum. Already, however, special skates, with every modern improvement, are being ordered by those who are the warmest admirers of the sport.

Most Men Are Mormons at Heart

By Helen Oldfield

There is no characteristic in which men and women differ more radically than in the comprehensiveness, what may be called the elasticity, of their affection. A woman, as a rule, is in love with but one man at a time. She may hold and practice the ancient doctrine of her sex that the more strings to her bow, or beaux to her string, the better. Admiration may be true, but yet claimed that "this heart was true to Poll" was a fiction strictly founded upon fact. Bigamists in every land where it is a legal offense also is a usual one. And that not only among the "masses," every now and then society is startled by the discovery that some man of wealth and high repute, who has seemed a devoted husband and father, has played the same role to another woman and her children.

On the contrary, although there are many exceptions to the rule, most men are Mormons at heart, and apparently find no great difficulty in loving two or a dozen women simultaneously. The sailor with a sweetheart in every port, who yet claimed that "this heart was true to Poll" was a fiction strictly founded upon fact. Bigamists in every loves much and rarely; she may transfer her affections, but she does not scatter them, a little here, a little there.

POOR WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR!

He Wants Social Power and a Great Title, Yet His Daughter Marries a Plain Captain and now

His Son is Engaged to an American Girl whose Chief Dower is her Beauty

Again a love match has thwarted the social aspirations of William Waldorf Astor.

This self-expatriated New Yorker had counted, if rumor be true, on his daughter's marriage with a title to strengthen his social position. She married a plain captain in the British army.

And now his son and namesake, Waldorf Astor, is to marry, not into one of the great families of Europe, but an American girl, a "Gibson Girl" from Virginia, whose only dower is her beauty and high breeding.

She is another of the "beautiful Langhorns" of Virginia, all of whom have married wealth, though poor themselves, one of the five southern beauties made famous the world over by Charles Dana Gibson.

The engagement is announced of Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Shaw, former wife of Robert Gould Shaw, second, of Boston, to Waldorf Astor, elder son of William Waldorf Astor, lately of New York, but now of London. They are to be married within a few days. It is a union of great wealth with surpassing beauty.

Miss Pauline Astor, Waldor's sister, recently became the bride of Captain Spender-Clay, of modest fortune and no title save his military one.

WILL BE A STEPFATHER.

Young Astor will also begin his married life with a stepson, for Mrs. Shaw has a handsome little boy now nearly eight years old. The courts have awarded to her his custody. But at certain stipulated periods he must be allowed to see his relatives in New England, despite the fact that his own home in the future will be old England.

English society is inclined to be chary of divorced persons. The firm and repellant British matron still has a very strong hold, but nothing like that of the good old days of Queen Victoria, when no divorced person could be presented at court. Mrs. Shaw's divorce is not for any great sin of her husband's, but just for desertion, under the Virginia law. The courts of Great Britain have no such law.

William Waldorf Astor is not at all popular, and he and the king are not good friends. In fact, Mr. Astor went out of his way once to insult Sir Berkeley Milne, captain of the royal yacht, when brought to his house by a guest. Captain Berkeley-Milne was asked to leave, and Mr. Astor printed the fact in his newspaper that the gentleman had not been invited.

The king and all clubdom took up the gauntlet for the sailor. He was bidden to the royal box at the theater, for all society, including Mr. Astor, to see. Special favors were showered upon him. And society, following the king's lead, snubbed Mr. Astor.

But Mrs. Shaw is extremely popular. She has been presented at court and has been a guest at many of the smartest house parties. The king is charmed with her southern vivacity and grace and adores her wit and cleverness.

King Edward has always admired beauty, charm and talent, though he holds snobbery in supreme contempt, and he considers Mr. Astor a snob. Nor does he admire Mr. Astor so much for having expatriated himself to become a British subject instead of an American citizen.

The king thinks mightily well of the United States and can see no reason for persons, even though they reside in England, renouncing their nationality.

YOUNG ASTOR STILL AN AMERICAN.

Here arises another complication to all this social mixup. Young Mr. Astor is not a Britisher, though his father is. He is of age, and has taken no legal step to become a naturalized Englishman. On the contrary, he has announced himself both here and there to be an American citizen, and our courts have decided that he is a citizen. This was when he applied to become an executor under the will of his greatgrandfather, who died in 1848, leaving $20,000,000, which has since been multiplied ten times over.

But, be all this as it may, another Gibson girl has won a triumph. She has engaged herself to a young man who is one of the three heirs to a fortune now estimated to be $200,000,000, and increasing by millions every year.

Everybody calls the five Langhorns the "Gibson girls." All their poise and good looks have been immortalized by Charles Dana Gibson. Four of them are married, and the fifth, Miss Nora, won't be long, so the gossips say, without being led in triumph to the altar by some proud young fellow.

The eldest sister is Mrs. Monroe Perkins, of Richmond. Next comes the star Gibson girl of them all, the one who became Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson herself.

The wife dropped as much of her ex-husband's name as she could, and became

Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Shaw, London was charmed with her. Mrs. John Jacob

her wing, and introduced her to the best

little group of intimates that gravitate about the king. Together they were presented at court, and became twin social successes from the start.

Not only her beauty, but her wit and her superb riding, won Mrs. Shaw her way. She was invited everywhere.

Nobles vied with each other in trying to secure her for their parties. She hunted with the best packs in all England. Her darling and aplomb became matter for talk in foyer, clubroom and boudoir.

Then came gossip-gossip that linked

Mrs. Shaw's name in possible alliances with some of the proudest houses on both sides of the water. There was talk first that she had promised to marry Robert

W. Goelet, cousin of her chum, the Duchess of Roxburghe, who was Miss

May Goelet. Then there were persistent rumors that she was engaged to young Lord Revelstoke, the bachelor head of the house of Baring, one of the catches of London and among the town's richest young men.

But even greater good fortune was awaiting Mrs. Shaw. Through Mrs. John Jacob Astor, Mrs. Shaw met Mrs. Astor's cousin by marriage, Waldorf Astor, and the young man promptly lost his heart. He proposed last summer and was accepted.

There is just the slightest sort of talk that Mr. Astor delayed the announcement in the hope that his son might change his mind. The American expatriate has very decided ideas about social position and the peerage, and it has always been his ambition that his children marry into the nobility of Great Britain.

London society frankly admits that any other man but Mr. Astor, for all that he has done for society, art and charity in England, would before this have received a title from the crown. But his unpopularity has interfered with his ambition, and nothing can be done without the favor of the king.

But Miss Pauline married a captain and now Waldorf is engaged to a comparatively poor American, John Jacob Astor, second, is hardly of marriageable age and is devoted to the military just now, having accepted a sub-Lieutenancy in the guards. There was a younger daughter, Miss Gwendolyn, who died.

Young Mr. Astor has made himself many friends despite his father's unpopularity. He doesn't speak with a British drawl and he doesn't wear a monocle and he doesn't affect a bored air. In fact, he is very frank, affable and not a bit impressed with himself, as he might be.

He was born on May 19, 1879, in New York, and is twenty-seven years old. His fiancee is a year his senior. His mother, who died twelve years ago in London, was Miss Mary Dahlgren Paul of Philadelphia. At the time of his birth the Astors lived at 6 East Thirty-third street. In 1890 the Astors went to England, and since that time it has been their home.

The young man was educated at Eton, where he rowed in one of the crews, and at Oxford, where he became a crack polo player and was captain of the varsity polo team. After graduation he entered the racing field, and his colors, light blue, with pink sash and cap, are registered on the English turf. His horses are trained at the famous Kingscote establishment in Hampshire. He is the first of his family to enter upon a turf career.

He didn't want to be interviewed, but at length he consented to say a few words to the World. Among other things, he remarked:

"If I were by some misfortune to be made penniless I should complete some special lines in law that have a great fascination for me, and I would try to be a success. I am living my life the same as any young man must do who cares for the respect of the world. I work harder than most chaps who have to work for their living, because I have to do many duties that the average man does not.

"If a man is on the level, no matter whether he is poor or rich, he is entitled to respect, and generally he gets it. I am just the same as any other man of ordinary intelligence, and not much different in appearance from lots of other men you meet in the streets hourly.

"When the duties my father has set me to do allow, I go for a week's shooting. The tramping in the open country lets off the pent-up steam that a continued application to the routine of one's life creates."

Once and for all the young man declared himself an American and proud of it. This wasn't needed for London to know it as well as New York. They tell this story in the clubs:

An officer in the guards happened to remark in a West End club one afternoon that he could run "any American hustler off the road in an automobile." The same officer had a few days before met young Astor from passing him in another car by running zig-zag along the road.

"Yes," remarked young Mr. Astor, "if you kept wobbling about like a duck in a thunderstorm, as you did the other day."

"I am an officer and a gentleman," snapped the guardaman, "and you must withdraw that remark."

"I won't," coolly retorted the heir to the Astor millions, "and what's more, I will repeat it every time I hear you disparaging my country or my countrymen."

"Your country?" sneered the officer. "Your father abandoned America to become a British subject, and you are a British subject, too."

"I don't care what my father is," fairly roared the young man. "I am an American, and as an American I will stand by what I have said!"

There might have been blows then, but friends pulled the belligerents apart. However, it did young Astor a world of good, and gained him the respect of all the decent Englishmen whom he met.

Inasmuch as he was born here and is of age and acts in a fiduciary capacity under the laws of the state of New York, which an alien cannot do, and particularly because he has made no legal application to become a British subject, young Astor must be taken at his word—he is an American just as much as any of the Astors who were born here.

The Astor estate is conducted on strictly business principles and millions are added to it every year. All surplus income is at once reinvested in choice real estate, which is promptly improved and allowed to increase in value. Should young Mr. Astor come into his inheritance twenty-five years hence he will doubtless find it doubled in value.

According to Astor custom the young man will inherit the bulk of his father's $200,000,000.

Play Is a Factor in Education

I take it that the overwhelming importance of a play lies in the value it possesses as a brake. It is a truism that civilization demands more numerous and more rapid nervous adjustments, at least for large classes of the community. It does not seem that what we call the physical basis of mental life properly is sustained without intervals for physical recreation, by activities which make little demand on the higher nervous centers. We hardly are aware to the national importance of play as recreation. But the almost shrieking and horseplay of the noisy of the girls and boys in the asphalt playgrounds of our primary schools, veritably play as it is in a biological and psychological sense, is just that sort of play which is degrading, which I hope to see diminished.

Guilds of play, school clubs, and kindred agencies are based on the view that natural play is divine—most of those in close contact with the facts of human life know it is not—but that artificial play may be invented which will satisfy the desire for movement and beauty without gratifying low tastes and sentiments.

And this same justification is found in belief as in acting. We cannot long maintain ourselves in the heights; we descend for rest to the lower slopes, perfect being, according to the law of its species. And unimpeded development, spontaneity, and liberty were enthroned as ethical ideals.

But with Malthus and Darwin, and particularly with the doctrine of the origin of species, there came a great change. Spontaneous variation was indeed the moving force, but it might occur in one direction just as much as another. The environment selected which should survive. Struggle for survival took the place of unimpeded development. "God helps those who help themselves" became the text of many edifying books; free trade all around; work first, play afterwards.

their outcome educationally was the exaltation of competitive examination and "payment by results." Then came the dictum "Ontogeny repeats phylogeny," the child passes through the stages which the race has passed through. Such a theory requires that the spontaneous activities of childhood shall be recapitulatory.

But both these great optimisms have given way. Neither unrestricted liberty nor equality in strife commands the thought of today. The survival of the fittest turns out to mean the survival of those who do survive since that is the law of nature. This is in the long run, as the economists say, national persistence may be the best another strong support of midcentury optimism.

The upward movement of men in the whole, which was to diminish the two populations, we may be pardoned

for not thinking too highly of the surroundings.

So that the educational justification of complete recapitulation is gone and we need not regard impulse and instinct as divine guides to which exclusive attention must be given. But there is something on the other side. It is true, we doubt, as some recent work seems to show, that variation is not a trend and is not entirely indifferent in direction, yet we lack that confidence in the inheritance of acquired characters which formed yet another strong support of midcentury optimism.

The upward movement of men in the whole, which was to diminish the

for not thinking too highly of the surroundings.

Nature, not nurture, has again become the dominant partner, but nature, no longer as a benevolent mother working wholly for good, but as a stern taskmaster whom we must obey if we study him carefully, we may snatch here and there a little victory for our own ideals.

And this view, as I take it, has an exact application to the school work of today. Let us by all means study the spontaneities of play; no instructive work in this department can be thrown away, but to erect our inspiring conclusions into pedagogical im-

ONE IS THE WIFE OF A MULTI-MILLIONAIRE TWO SISTERS THE OTHER SELLS NEWSPAPERS TO MAKE HER LIVING

MRS. HOWARD GOULD

The Wealth Possessed by Mrs. Howard Gould Brings Her an Income Greater Than She Can Spend, While Ella Clemens, Her Sister, Works Among the Lowly and Lives in the Obscurity of Poverty

Two sisters! What fond visions of real life. In this particular case, however, it can not be questioned, for the sister who is the child of wealth and luxury is Mrs. Howard Gould of New York city, and the sister who is the child of poverty and obscurity is Miss Ella Clemens of San Francisco.

Years ago both these sisters spelled their name Clemens. Then the more fortunate and beautiful of the two saw a chance for herself on the stage. She changed the spelling of her name to Clemmons. The artistic success she won before the footlights was slight, but her brief spell there was not wasted, for it gained her the love of Howard Gould, son of J. Gould, brother of George Gould, and member of a family for whose name the term wealth has almost become a synonym.

MARRIES A MILLIONAIRE

In a short time the name of the more beautiful of the two girls had undergone still another change. It was now Gould. She was the wife of one of the wealthiest men in the United States.

But the other sister clung to the name Clemens, and shared none of the good fortune that came to the actress.

In fact, as the one sister gained in wealth and position, the other, pursued by a perverse fate, has grown poorer, until today the only barrier between her and poverty is what she can realize from the sale of newspapers—at most not more than a couple of dollars a day.

An earthquake tore away the veil of obscurity that enshrouded the life of Ella Clemens, and knowledge of her existence was brought to public notice when the house to which she lived suffered sadly in the flaming horror that so lately made a wreck of the chief city of the Golden Gate. It was located right in the heart of the Oriental district. The artistic success she had won before the footlights was slight, but her brief spell there was not wasted, for it gained her the love of Howard Gould, son of J. Gould, brother of George Gould, and member of a family for whose name the term wealth has almost become a synonym.

HOVEL A "HOUSE OF GOLD."

This little refuge, the "House of Gold," Miss Clemens maintained herself, without aid from any one. And when a time came that she no longer made from her sale of papers enough money to meet its expenses she moved into the house next door, a rat-hole of a place, where all she had was a basement.

A dozen children have been named after the angel of the Chinese district. They take her name because of their gratitude at the things she has done for them.

Men and women with troubles came to her and poverty is what she can realize from the sale of newspapers—at most not more than a couple of dollars a day.

Ella's little refuge had no doorway from the street. Its exterior was made of unpainted boards ten feet high. Over the roof was a cross, and a figure of Christ, child at the head of the twisting alley that led to the room told a story of welcome and kindness in a neighborhood that has rich need of uplift the lowly.

The door was never closed. The little children of Chinatown ran wild in and out of it, never interfered with, never scolded by the gentle Little Lady who was its mistress. There were toys and picture books for the pleasure and instruction of the little visitors.

White Katherine Gould spread the glories of her marvelous wardrobe before admiring at the opera, while she dashed down Fifth avenue in her $12,000 automobile, and sailed luxuriously in her $400,000 steam yacht. Her sister was teaching English to the children of Chinatown, taking care of lepers, in such hideously advanced stages of the disease that even nurses and doctors avoided service.

MISS ELLA CLEMENS

Two sisters! What fond visions of real life. In this particular case, however, it can not be questioned, for the sister who is the child of wealth and luxury is Mrs. Howard Gould of New York city, and the sister who is the child of poverty and obscurity is Miss Ella Clemens of San Francisco.

OVER the ROYAL ROAD to LEARNING

The old saying that there is no royal road to learning does not seem true of fraternity life in Ann Arbor, where, in thirty-four sorority and fraternity houses nearly 800 young men and women live and study in the midst of most luxurious surroundings. Unlike the old time students who spent their college days in bare attics and studied by the light of feeble tallow dips, these modern seekers after knowledge have suites of beautifully furnished rooms in buildings which are more like hotels than students' halls. Their study rooms are equipped with desks, easy chairs and all the comforts of the best of homes, their libraries are filled with reference books, fiction and magazines and in nearly all of the "frat" houses are smoking, card and music rooms, all of them lavishly decorated and furnished. Some of the parlors and reception rooms are as magnificent as those in Detroit's most exclusive and richest clubs.

At this rate, fraternity men, even those who live cheapest, spend about twice as much for their living as do the same number of independent students. The average cost of living in Ann Arbor is about $300 a year, and in contrast to this 794 sorority and fraternity people pay about $550,000 for their living. In other words, 1850 independent students could live on what the "frat" men pay annually.

OTHER EXPENSES.

Nor is fraternity life expensive only in the cost of board and room. The social duties of frat men are much more numerous than those of independent students, and when all of the demands of the life are considered it is safe to estimate that, exclusive of matriculation fees and book expenses, it ordinarily costs economical fraternity men at least $1000 a year to attend college, while many undoubtedly spend several times as much. It is generally conceded that the yearly expenditure of the average sorority girl is not more than one-half of that of the fraternity man.

A visit among the fraternity houses of Ann Arbor is one of especial interest. On South State street alone are seven "frat" houses among which are three of the most luxurious in the university town, the Delta Kappa Epsilon, the Beta Theta Pi and the Zeta Psi.

The Zeta Psi house is a three-story mansion of solid red stone with wide stone verandas and extensive front and back lawns. The front door opens in a magnificent reception hall. On one side is a large music room and at the rear are double doors which lead into the finest fraternity dining room in Ann Arbor. It is in this last named room that the Zeta Psi boys have some of their best times. Down the center of the room runs a long table at which the twenty-four members of the fraternity may be seated. All about the room are plate shelves filled with steins, trophies and goblets. At the end opposite the doors is a large brick fireplace in which, on winter evenings, a bright log fire is kept burning. At meal times, the raftered ceiling of this room rings with jolly laughter and while liveried waiters pass to and fro through the kitchen doors the fortunate students who eat in this room make the whole house echo with their merriment. Sometimes the diners are models of dignity, but more often "biscuit-ball" and an air of general hilarity prevail. Throughout the Zeta Psi house is an sumptuously furnished as in the dining-room. The music room, parlor, smoking room and bedrooms are all in harmony with the building's exterior.

THE "DEEK" HOUSE.

If there is one fraternity house in Ann Arbor which has finer private studies and bedrooms than the Zeta Psi, it is the Delta Kappa Epsilon, or "Deek" house. In this fraternity every suite is a model of beauty and luxury, but in accordance with college ethics no suite is a model of tidiness. Clothes, books, pictures, shoes, pipes, college banners and trophies lie scattered about each room. The different students come and go as freely in one another's rooms as though they were absolutely public, and if two men happen to be of the same size they are almost as free with each other's clothes as with the private rooms. As the visitor leaves the "Deek" house he may hear a yell like that of a band of Indians coming from the magnificent new Beta Theta Pi house just across the street. It does not indicate violence, but only that a few of the boys are indulging in a "quiet" game of cards or in a game of leap frog in the reception hall.

This hall of the "Beta Theta" house is quite the finest thing of its kind in Ann Arbor. Finished entirely in weathered oak and rising two stories with wide balconies on all sides, it is very much like the lobby of some public building. Wide stairs rise from the center and massive double doors open from each side into the rooms equally magnificent. It is in one of these, the smoking room, that the Beta Theta Pi members spend most of their time while in the house. This room, which measures about 30 by 40 feet, is lined on three sides with wide leather settees. On the fourth side is a wide brick fireplace, and beside it stands a piano. In this fireplace a fire is kept burning nearly all the year round. The room is so large that a fire does not add much to its warmth even in the summertime, and it does add greatly to the comfortable appearance of the room. Here, in the evening, the boys gather to relate stories and to enjoy their evening smokes. Sitting in a ring about the fire and lounging on the settees, they talk of college affairs, and, it is said, they lay plans for many of the escapades which keep the university town in a turmoil.

OTHER "FRATS."

Besides the three mentioned there are on South State street the Alpha Delta Phi, the Delta Chi, the Phi Delta Phi and the Sigma Chi houses.

The Alpha Delta Phi and the Sigma Chi houses are among the oldest fraternity houses in the city, yet in many ways they are as luxurious as the more modern and expensive places.

The Alpha Delta Phi has a library which is the equal of any in Ann Arbor, and here one may find young men gathered at

About the walls hang portraits of the country's prominent men and of old and honored members of the "frat."

The book cases are well stocked with the best works and the table is usually filled high with the latest periodicals.

The Delta Phi have planned to build a new home next year, but all of them acknowledge that they will regret leaving the old library, with which are connected so many traditions and which has been the study room for so many fraters.

One meets with another agreeable surprise when he sees the library and living rooms in the Delta Upsilon house on the corner of Hill and Forest streets. This frat house stands in the midst of a thick grove and is a fine three-story building of the Georgian style. Its massive doors are flanked by great stone columns. As one passes between these he enters a living room finished in the medieval Dutch style. Heavy mission seats are placed on each side of the doors, and from the raftered ceiling hang old-fashioned brass lanterns. At one side is a "cubicle" room with a fireplace. The walls are hung with portraits of prominent men and women, and the ceiling is decorated with a large painting of a landscape. The room is well lighted by gas lamps and the floor is covered with a large rug. The furniture consists of a large sofa, a chair, and a small table. The room is very comfortable and inviting.

Are You the Grinder of the Ground?

Are you quite sure that in the observance of community amenities you are keeping close enough to the line that marks gentility and breeding in social life?

"Ground in yonder social mill."

We rub each other's angles down." If the poet should have had under consideration the great community mills of the modern great city it is a certainty that his philosophy would have called for a rougher dress in rhyme. The crowded city street is a human glacier; the crowded city cars and trains are too packed to admit of literal grinding; shop, and store, and theater, and dining place may be hives of incivilities.

In them are you, reader, grinder or the ground? There is no dodging the condition. You are ground, or you are grinding. And whether grinder or the ground, you cannot escape the charge of being a full party to this outraging of a nation's courtesy, as well as a party to one of the most wasteful forms of community extravagance in economy and temper

CHARGES AGAINST

RESTAURANT MAN

GALETON, Pa., June 16.—Aroused by the stories of three little girls that J. T. Wheat, a local restaurant keeper, had repeatedly assailed them, residents of this place last night held an indignation meeting in the Methodist church, which was crowded to the doors. One preacher who addressed the throng is reported to have blared at strong measures, and in general a high pitch of excitement was reached.

Wheat is now in prison at Coudersport and will be tried at next week's term of criminal court. His accusers are the two daughters of Butler Brundage, aged 9 and 12 years respectively, and Amelia Johnson, 11 years old. According to their stories, Wheat transgressed more than once after propitiating the children with trifling presents of candies and small sums of money.

Miss A. Driscoll, humane agent for the district, today took the three children to Coudersport and had a long conference with District Attorney A. R. Emsworth. As hints of improper influence have been bruited about, the girls have been taken from the custody of their parents and placed in charge of Mrs. A. E. Lambert, one of the most prominent women of this town.

Feeling in Galeton has grown intense, there is already one local resident in

This X-Ray Scientist Sacrifices His Life in the Pursuit of His Studies

ROCHESTER, June 16.—The medical profession throughout the world has recognized that it suffered a great loss in the death here of Dr. Louis A. Weigel, the eminent X-ray specialist, who gave up his life in the pursuit of solutions to mysteries of the Roentgen light. Attention has been attracted to his life work and his death particularly on account of the X-rays having produced the disease that killed Dr. Weigel by inches.

The last two years of his life were fraught with immense importance to the medical world because they encompassed the last course of his unknown disease and most of the many efforts that were made to cure it. Dr. Weigel was the first American authority on the Roentgen ray, and from its introduction in this country was one of the most successful operators in its application to surgery.

The result was that early in 1904 his right hand began to show a cancerous growth. For a time its cause was a source of wonder to Dr. Weigel himself, but he satisfied himself that nothing but the X-rays was responsible.

The disease spread in spite of every treatment that his wide knowledge and that of other physicians could suggest.

In October, 1901, eminent surgeons decided after long discussion that if Dr. Weigel's life was to be saved he must sacrifice his right hand and three fingers of the left. The strange cancerous growth from the uncanny green light had spread over the right hand and up the wrist to the first joint, and caused untold agony. The left hand was going the same course, and the science of medicine had no relief to offer.

Dr. Weigel recovered rapidly and went to the West Indies and Jamaica, and returned last fall full of apparent health and strength. He had been home from Jamaica but a few months when he began to fall.

MUSCLES OF BREAST REMOVED.

In February, 1906, he submitted to another operation at the city hospital and all of the muscles of his left breast and the axillae were removed, the cancerous growth having developed there the same as on his hands. Dr. Weigel knew then, as he told friends, that he could not live long. He rallied and became able to be about and to attend to certain professional duties. Altogether six operations were performed during the years of fighting the X-ray disease. The last attack forced him to his bed only one week before his death. It was an attack accompanied by great suffering.

Dr. Lewis W. Rose of this city, one of

Dr. Weigel's physicians and closest as-

gan its course, talked most interestingly to a World representative about the green-light disease.

"The trouble started," said Dr. Rose, "apparently as an affection of the skin. Dr. Weigel did not know in its first stages that it was caused by his use of the Roentgen rays. Numerous theories were advanced by different ones as to the cause. Among other theories were those that the trouble might have arisen from the use of a certain device used in his photographic work, or that it might have come from the making of plaster casts in his orthopedic work. But we all became later satisfied that the X-ray was the sole cause. His case was the same as that of three others in the United States who have experimented with X-rays and contracted the same fatal disease and paid the penalty."

Dr. Rose said there first appeared on the back of Dr. Weigel's right hand the signs of keratosis, an accumulation of cells, dry horny elevations of skin.

The nails and skin cracked and small ulcers formed. There was also what might be called slow chronic inflammation of the blood cells and capillaries and inflammation of the bony tissues.

"This disturbance of the nutrition of the parts," said Dr. Rose, "continued to such an extent that death of the parts ensued. This was first noted in the case of the third and fourth fingers of the right hand. Technically the growth would be called papillomatous which formed on the back of both hands. The left hand showed the affection soon after the right."

Speaking of the last illness of Dr. Weigel, Dr. Rose said:

"The growth in the arm pit was on the lymphatics. In the last operation the pectoral muscles and lymphatic glands under them were removed. This extensive wound healed kindly, only to break down in six weeks into a rapidly developing and destructive process."

"Has the study in the X-ray disease in Dr. Weigel, by himself and his physicians, resulted in any new theories as to the cause of cancer?" was asked.

"No, it has not," Dr. Rose replied. "Why the Roentgen ray causes the cancerous growth we cannot say."

Dr. Clarence A. Greenleaf, who was four years with Dr. Weigel in his early

X-ray experiments, contracted the same disease, but Dr. Greenleaf gave up his practice a year ago and went to live on his farm, where he has greatly improved.

you going to do about it? In traffic in congested streets and public places were for the production of power for a municipality the friction in the power plants would leave no unexpected energy. The institution would be bankrupt in six weeks. In reality all these places are power plants in which the conserving of energy, the diminution of friction, and the preservation of good nature are essentials to community welfare. Is it not worth your while to refrain from aggressive friction in this great powerhouse? Or as a passive frictional element, don't you owe it to yourself and to society to reduce the condition? And by force of might if necessary?

MARMALADE TO BE MADE FROM KELP

SEATTLE, June 16.—The kelp which clutters the beaches of Friday Harbor and other points down the sound is to be converted into citron preserves and marmalades by a process recently invented by Professor Theodore Frye of the department of botany at the University of Washington and Professor Edward Magnusson of the department of electrical engineering.

The process has been perfected and the lovers of sweets among the students who have been allowed to taste the products pronounce them at least equal to the genuine articles that their mothers make at home.

Application has been made for a patent upon the process which is a chemical one, and steps have been taken for the formation of a company to undertake the conversion of the unsuspecting kelp into table delicacies upon a large scale. Local growers are being interested in the undertaking and it is expected that as soon as the patent has been allowed the formation of a company will be announced.

The greatest difficulty which the two scientists encountered in their work was in extracting the bitter taste from the seaweed. For a time this tang overpowered all efforts at sweetening and threatened to balk their ideas. At last, however, a chemical was discovered which counteracts this and now all is reported to be lovely.

The new brand of scientific preserves is expected to shortly decorate the dining tables of Seattle housekeepers.

SEARCHED SEVEN YEARS FOR A LAUGH AND FOUND A BRIDE.

Noble de Haas, traveler and lecturer, found the laugh for which he searched through seven years.

The tale of the courtship and the long search of the lecturer for the laugh was revealed at Seatac, R. I., and the story of the strange love affair and happy ending was told through all that district of Providence county.

For seven years, at the cost of much time and much money, De Haas sought for the owner of the laugh with which he was in love—and it was he who told the story of his long search and his strange love affair.

In March, 1898, De Haas was lecturing on "Picturesque America," and using a stereopticon to illustrate his talk. He had traveled widely in his life and had secured thousands of photographs of the beauty spots of the United States from Maine to California, and, under the persuasion of a lecture bureau, he had agreed to give the illustrated lectures through the cities and towns of New England, especially under the arrangement of the bureau with churches and societies.

De Haas lived in Boston, and from there he made tours to the smaller towns and cities that dot New England. His original photographs, which he colored himself with beautiful effects, and his brilliant powers of description earned for him something of a reputation through the territory that he covered, and he was in demand for return dates.

His first season as a lecturer was in 1897, and during the following summer he toured the great southwest, the picturesque borderland of Mexico, gathering many wonderful photographs of mountain and desert, of the strange peoples and their strange abodes, of mines, of animals, of nature's wonderful freaks.

One hot day he was resting in the shade of a dove ranch house down in the Mimbre valley. The little Mexican and half-breed children, clad only in one short cotton shirt each, were playing in the cool shade of another dove a few yards away. Between the two patches of shade lay a glancing stretch of white sand hot and dazzling under the burning rays of the sun.

The children wanted to reach the doves which hung near where De Haas was sitting, and they started across the hot sand. As they came hopping and prancing like fleas on a hot griddle, De Haas snapped his camera and caught a perfect picture.

It was this picture that produced the laugh that resulted in the strange love affair. That night in March, 1898, De Haas, lecturing on the beauties of the southwest, in the Congregational church at Ponagansett, R. I., suddenly sprang the picture of the little brown children hopping across the hot sand.

He hesitated an instant after the laugh. He laughed at himself over laughter died down and stood, leaning the absurdity of the idea—but was forward as if entranced, striving with force to admit that he was in love, all his might to locate the spot whence that beautiful, rippling laughter came.

In April—five weeks after he heard the laugh—he ran up to Ponagansett and made further inquiries, calling upon lights were turned on and, many persons he had met and asking each one, casually, if they remembered the laugh. A dozen or more did remember it, but they could give him no clue to its possessor. One person said he sat in the same pew—but he remembered only that a man and a girl had been in the pew with him—and he had that intuition would reveal to him the owner of the laugh. He watched each person who advanced toward him to shake hands and congratulate him. The quest seemed hopeless—but De Haas was not discouraged. He determined that he would make another attempt—and to the surprise of the Methodist church, he cheerfully volunteered to repeat his lecture free for the benefit of the building fund of the church, adding new views and chang-

erite because he hid his selfish object.

He determined to make up for this by adding a liberal donation out of his own pocket to the building fund. He really hoped that he would hear the laugh again, and in his deep plot he selected most of the amusing pictures in his collection, being determined that if the owner of the laugh was in the house he would make her laugh again, and he made up his mind that if he heard the laugh he would find the

a woman that storms, when she begins he generally takes his hat and slams the front door between them, leaving her to have it out with herself.

The wife is anxious to make up because she doesn't care to become an object of pity. She doesn't want to have her old schoolgirl chum come around and shed tears over her, bemoaning the nature of man and assuring her that men are all alike adding, "And you know, you can't trust one of them around the corner." In the old days she had been glad to talk things over with her chum, but since her marriage she has drawn away from her and from all the other girls she used to know. She certainly never intended to let these friendships wane, but marriage has somehow shut her up in a little narrow world of two people. Nobody is permitted to peep into the inner life of this world her own mother is acquainted only with its frustration and good temper for nothing can be worse for children than to be brought up in an atmosphere of continual bickering and fault-finding. Children are educated more by imitation than by books and so they naturally copy the manners and style of conversation used at home. A woman's love remains in a romantic condition longer than her husband's does because she is naturally more sentimental. In the home atmosphere this sentimentality is apt to grow rather than decrease, whereas what little sentimentality the husband has been able to get up for the engagement and the honeymoon soon finds a natural drain in the prosaic every-day atmosphere of the business world.

LONGER A LOVER

A woman with no children has no one but her husband to lavish her affection upon and so because she has nothing to think of except to make herself charming in his eyes she keeps him in love longer than she would have if the husband had the care brought by only hand, tugging at her skirts until baby lips lips out their evening prayer at her knee. If she has no children, the romance of her love lasts longer, but then she misses the joys of motherhood. In either case the married woman is forced to make up her tiffs with her husband because of her love for him.

She is not restrained by the pride that would keep a single girl from making up with her lover. She is not ashamed to go and tell John that she was in the wrong, but the young girl would no more think of making advances to Arthur than she would think of flying. She declares that as it was Arthur's prerogative to propose, it is also his prerogative to make the first advances.

Arthur is probably just as proud as she is and, being hurt to the quick, stays away and nurses his grievances until it is too late to come back. A quarrel between unmarried lovers is a dangerous thing because they have not the compelling motives for making up that married people have, and also because there are all sorts of things that actually keep them from forgiving and forgetting. If they do learn to forgive and forget it takes them a long time, and they have certainly no conception of bearing and forbearing for only married life teaches that.

DOES NOT EXIST.

Before they are married they take themselves and each other too seriously. The girl does not know as much about men as her married sister does, she has not seen enough of the sun and folly in the world to be able to forgive it. She is young and she has ideals. She lives in a romantic world that does not exist.

Suppose that she has formed an ideal of a man as all girls do and suppose that she thinks that Arthur is the incarnation of that ideal. Arthur has perhaps never happened to mention the fact that occasionally when out with the boys he takes a glass or two. He has never seen any particular harm in it and it has not occurred to him to mention it any more than it would to say that he got his gloves at a certain store. But one day the girl finds it out, and feeling that her ideal is shattered and that life is no longer worth living, she breaks off the engagement.

Her married sister, on the other hand, thinks but little of the occasions or even frequent lapse of her husband. She has learned a good deal about men and does not expect them to be perfect. So long as they are reasonably good she is satisfied.

A young girl expects to be made love to all the time, whereas her married sister has learned that there are times when a man feels like making love and times when he doesn't. She knows that when he is tired he does not feel like exerting himself to play the lover and what is more that he doesn't want to be coddled. He just wants to be let alone. Of course, he wants certain attentions paid him such as bringing him his slippers and his pipe but beyond that he doesn't want to be bothered.

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM ENDED.

The young girl doesn't know enough about men to realize this and consequently if on any particular night he is not as ardent as usual, she jumps to the conclusion that his love is wanting.

She gets huffy and irritable, and accuses him of not liking her. He is too tired to go into the question very deeply and being probably irritable himself a quarrel ensues. After an hour's bickering back and forth she takes off his ring and he takes his and goes. And that is the end of love's young dream.

A man simply cannot make love to a girl all the time any more than he can preserve his church-going spirit. He becomes very much annoyed by her jealousy although he is probably just as jealous himself. If a man says to her, "I want to speak to you later," the lover will grow savagely under his breath. Yes, when that gesser's out of the way, I suppose" and demands what there is between her and this fellow that they cannot talk before him. As a matter of fact, the other fellow's remark was probably made just as innocently as it was received by the girl, but the lover's insane jealousy will not permit him to take this point of view.

If he goes away to another city on business and if her letter does not come in the first mail he sets the reason down as being probably that she was out having a good time with the other fellow and when it does come he imagines he can read all sorts of things between the lines and so decided not to answer it. This of course results in a broken engagement.

Whether the lovers are married or single they should beware of a quarrel. If they are single the chances are against their making up, and love is too rare and precious a thing to be lightly played with. Men and women are not perfect and we should not expect them to be. Ideals do not exist, although we may find people who approximate to them.

Love, also is not perfect. Certainly at the beginning, when it is new, it has many things to learn and to unlearn. It is only after many long years that love begins to come near the perfect stage.

The reason why lovers' quarrel is most dangerous is because even if it is made up the feeling of the lovers for each other cannot possibly be the same as it was before they quarreled. They may love each other more after the sweet ceremonies of the making-up process, but there is the chance that they may find their affections less, and this is certainly a big risk to take.

Some people think that a quarrel is as necessary to a love affair as measles is to children. They say that a pair of lovers cannot get along without a quarrel, and declare that the lovers really enjoy these little tiffs, because the making up is so sweet.

Now, this is all right, provided the lovers do make up. There is the possibility, however, that they won't and then neither of them has anything in exchange for the pleasure of the tiff or of standing up for his or her particular side of the question except an aching heart.

Of course, if the lovers are married in nine cases out of ten they do make up. The difficulty has to be smoothed over somehow. If they are to continue living together in the same house. If there are children the parents must preserve at least an appearance of friendship and good temper for nothing can be worse for children than to be brought up in an atmosphere of continual bickering and fault-finding. Children are educated more by imitation than by books and so they naturally copy the manners and style of conversation used at home. A woman's love remains in a romantic condition longer than her husband's does because she is naturally more sentimental. In the home atmosphere this sentimentality is apt to grow rather than decrease, whereas what little sentimentality the husband has been able to get up for the engagement and the honeymoon soon finds a natural drain in the prosaic every-day atmosphere of the business world.

Suppose that she has formed an ideal of a man as all girls do and suppose that she thinks that Arthur is the incarnation of that ideal. Arthur has perhaps never happened to men-

ing whatever was humorous in a situation and keeping the spirits of himself and those with him up to the mark by some lively and inspiring illustration. Hector of Troy always has been one of my favorite heroes but I regret to say that I cannot see any evidence which authorizes me to credit him with a keen perception of his humorous side and we know that the brave and serious husband of Andromache came to utter failure in the end, and was made unseemly sport of his rival among the hostile gods, Julius Caesar, as we all know had a keen sense of humor. Some of his jests and his odd jocular sayings have been recorded in history and still may be appreciated and the few relies we have of his poetical ventures give evidence of his refined and delicate humor perception. Only to a man blessed with a sense of humor would any one have ventured on the eccentric method by which Cleopatra's first presentation to him was so oddly accomplished. Was there not even a certain melancholy in those last words recorded of him when the stab of Brutus bade him his life to a close? It is common is said and believed that George Washington was wanting in humor. I never have seen any reference to a man in this belief and I lately in a book reading in a biography of Washington by Norman Hapgood, many passages which confirm me in the opinion that the stereotyped description of Washington's character is defective on this point, and that a sense of humor was one of his characteristic qualities. A passage from one of his letters, quoted by Hapgood, seems to me to contain some delightful touches of humor. In it Washington who is writing about the army of painters and sculptors who were, as Mr. Hapgood puts it, "busy seeking his and their own immortality," says:

"I am so hackneyed to the touch of painters' pencils that I now am altogether at their beck, and sit like Patience on a monument whilst they are delineating the lines on my face. It is proof, among many others, of what habit and custom can accomplish. At first I was as impatient at the request, and as restive under the operation, as a colt is of the saddle. The next time I submitted reluctantly but with less floundering. Now no drayhorse moves more readily to his thills than I do to the painter's chair."

I might quote many other evidences taken from the same volume which show that under the gravities of Washington's expression of face, and under his quiet, restrained manner, there burned the light of genuine humor, which occasionally shot forth its flashes to those around. One can well understand how such a light must have cheered its owner through the long strain upon his patience and perseverance to which he had to submit during many of the campaigns which seemed, from time to time, almost hopeless of happy result, but which, under his guidance, ended in complete success.

Turn to the extraordinary career of Abraham Lincoln. Here we have a man who could apply his gift of humor to the most practical purposes of political life. He could put new heart into discouraged followers by some suddenly appropriate jest, he could throw light on some obscure problem in statesmanship by a humorous anecdote, he could reduce some opposing proposition to mere absurdity by a ludicrous comparison; he could dispense of some pretentious objection by a jocular phrase. We know, from all we have read of Lincoln, how his mar-ous gift of humor sustained and comforted those around him in the darkest season of what seemed to be almost hopeless gloom. The whole career of the man would have been different if he had not been endowed with this marvelous possession, and, indeed, it hardly seems possible to form any conception of Abraham Lincoln without this characteristic, and priceless endowment of humor.

The more earnest a man is the more thoroughly pervaded and inspired he is by this humorous instinct. If he happens to possess any faculty of humor at all. Some of the most powerful preachers the world over have known are blessed with this gift, and were able to use it for the noblest ends without seeming to lower the sacred dignity of the cause they had at heart.

I have not said anything in this article about the men who merely were humorists and achieved success as such, for, of course to affirm that the gift of humor is essential to the success of a mere humorist would be as vapid a truism as to declare that a great musician must have a sense of music, or that a great painter must have an eye for outline and color.

Even Syden Smith who always employed his gift of humor for the exposition and maintenance of purposes and principles essential to the progress of humanity, does not come within the scope of this article, the main object of which is to maintain that humor may be one of the main elements of life in the manner or career, and, if it does nothing better may help its possessor to bear up cheerfully against difficulties, and find new courage to sustain him in his further efforts.

I am confident that the more closely and deeply the question is studied from the history of any time, and from all that we know of the lives of great men, the more clear it will become that humor may be considered one of the elements of success, along with perseverance, intelligence, clearness of purpose, readiness of resource, and daring hope.

Humor Is an Element of Life

By Justin McCarthy

Shakespeare has declared that "the man that hath no music in himself, nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds, is fit for treasons, stratagems, and spoils," and assures us that "the motions of his spirit are dull as night." It seems to me that the man serves much the same sort of description. I am of the opinion that a quick and abiding sense of humor is a great element of success in every department of life. I do not speak merely of victory in the more strictly artistic fields of human work, but am ready to maintain that, even in the prosaic and practical concerns of human existence, the sense of humor is an inciting and sustaining influence to carry a man through to the full development of his capacity and the attainment of his purpose. It is so in the art of war—it especially is so in the business of statesmanship.

Mortal life, at the best, is so full of perplexities, disappointments and reverses that it must be hard work indeed for a man who is endowed with no sense of humor to keep his spirits up through seasons of difficulty and depression, and maintain his energy—living despite the disheartening effects of commonplace and prosaic discouragements. A man who is easily disheartened does not appear to be destined by nature for the overcoming of difficulties and nothing is a happier incentive to the maintenance of good spirits than the quick sense of humor which finds something to make a man of even conditions which bring but sinking of the heart to the less fortunate mortal.

Diomedes too, appears to have been endowed with the same wonderful working faculty but I always have regarded Agamemnon as a solemn and pompous person who had no sense of humor to season and qualify his all-pervading sense of personal importance. Thersites, of course, was a mere buffoon and mere buffoonery is incompatible with a keen sense of humor. Ulysses we may well feel assured, must have pulled himself through many of his difficulties and dangers in his happy faculty of discern-

One can hardly read the story of without learning of some plucky and humorous mortal who kept his comrades alive and alert through all dangers and troubles by his ready humor and animal spirits. Read any account of a long protracted siege when the besieged had to resist assault from without and hunger within and you will be sure to be told how the humorous sallies of some leader were able to prevent those around him from sinking into the depths of despair. There are times when no good whatever is done by taking even the most serious things too seriously and a sudden flash of humor often lightens up the atmosphere as the blast of a trumpet might give new spirits and new energy amid the deepening gloom of some almost desperate day.

Most of the world's great military leaders have been distinguished for their keen sense of humor. Even if we go back to the distant historic regions where fact and fable are blended beyond the power of modern analysis, we shall find that the supreme leaders of men were endowed with the keen faculty which can brighten a trying situation by a timely jest. Homer's Achilles had, perhaps, a little too much of a cruel humor in some of his practical jokes but we cannot help seeing that he was a man who, at a moment of deepest depression, found the means of appealing in congenial fashion to the livelier qualities of his companion Greeks, and saved them by some happy phrase from the creeping paralysis of despondency.

GENIAL MR. CANFIELD, GAMBLER, DISCUSSES ART AND LITERATURE

A Few Specimens of High-Priced Art.

Richard Canfield is the man who calls himself a "gentleman" gambler. He conducted for years in New York the greatest gambling palace in the history of the metropolis and it is claimed that for fifteen years his earnings averaged close to $500,000 annually. He is the owner of much fine real estate in New York. His gambling palace was patronized by the most exclusive people in the United States. A United States senator lost $60,000 in his place, gave his note for the amount, later tried to compromise for $20,000, but was told by Canfield to pay the full sum or stand to have the matter aired in the courts. Of course he paid. Young Mr. Vanderbilt lost $300,000 and gave notes. His family tried to settle for a smaller sum but Canfield again was firm and the relatives had to come to terms.

These and a hundred other interesting things concerning the Canfield house came out recently in the courts of New York when the suit of John Delahuntly to recover $50,000 for legal services rendered Canfield, was tried. Delahuntly was for twelve years Canfield's friend and lawyer and helped him out of many a bad hole when Jerome and the other crusaders of New York were on his track. But the two fell out, Canfield refused to pay the $50,000, Delahuntly sued and all the facts about the gambling palace came out. The case has not yet been decided.

BY ROY L. McCARDELL.
(In New York World.)

We met on congenial grounds, Richard Canfield and I. Art for us, high art. I'd like to have it. We had never met before.

Canfield in repose is not at all an in-quiet black in dress and isn't extra finely upholstered at that.

A black square cutaway coat, a black waistcoat, a black cravat, a collar of the kind we used to call "Pleasantly," when the world was young to us; no jewelry, not even a watch

Canfield, the abdicated King of Gamblers, five feet seven, weight about a hundred and seventy-five, and worth five million dollars.

His former counsel, Lawyer Delahuntly, was suing him for $45,000 alleged to be due for legal services covering a period of two years.

We did not discuss the trial, its causes or consequences.

I won't discuss it now. We talked of art.

When he talks of art the face of Canfield lightens up.

It lightens up when he talks about anything except the paying for things at what he deems an excessive price.

Truly it can be said of Richard Canfield that he has "wining ways."

The King of handshakers, as well as the King of gamblers, is he. Had he gone into politics he would have been successful. Had he been a wine agent he would have been a success. He would have been successful at anything, for he is a great "mixer" and he knows how to get his.

Very few gamblers die rich. Canfield will.

What you remember most about him is his sunny smile; when every other impression has faded you will remember that beaming, good-humored "Gee-but-I'm-glad-to-see-you!" expression.

That smile may be smiled for business reasons or it may be natural to the man; anyway he has it. Talk of fortune's smile! Canfield has snuffed at fortune and so far has snuffed on him.

We talked of art.

He knows what he is talking about when the conversation turns to art. You may be bluffing, but you'd qualify as an expert.

I spoke of his pictures. Asked if he had sold his club-house—"club-house" is a term that covers a multitude of

"As a matter of fact," he said, "I had very few pictures at my club-house near Delmonico's. The scheme of decoration was paneling in rare woods; one couldn't hide that with pictures; pictures would have never done!"

By the emphasis in which he said it you could have known that with the means to buy fine examples of art Canfield has the taste to know how it should be displayed to charm the eye.

"The only picture of any great value that I had at the club-house was one that hung in my private office there, Gainesborough—Gainesborough portrait of his mother, you know."

"It's value? Oh, come now! Art and prices shouldn't be named together. Prices change, good art is always above price."

"No matter what is paid for any good example of art, it is bought cheap. A masterpiece may be purchased in a junk-shop for a few pennies—that detracts nothing from its value. It may sell for tens of thousands—that adds nothing."

"Your portrait by Whistler was the last thing he painted?" was asked.

"I believe so," replied Mr. Canfield. "Whistler was ill when he was working on it; the sittings were greatly delayed toward the last. But he added 'old Chippendale furniture' is my hobby."

"How about Sheraton?" we asked. "We'll not do it, but Sheraton to my mind is somewhat florid. I like the light, graceful, Greek lines of Chippendale, and the warm tones of the old mahogany."

"Books?"

"Well, after Chippendale, I think I like books—I have a collection—first editions, you know," said Mr. Canfield.

Then his smile faded away to a certain grimness—"It's a costly, a very costly mania," said Mr. Canfield.

"Old books?" we asked.

"Yes, but rare books, rather," replied the art lover. "To instance, first editions of Whitman, Hawthorne. Few American writers of our own times, you may say. They bring high prices, too, while a first edition of Boccaccio is almost priceless and folio Shakespeare! Pshaw!"

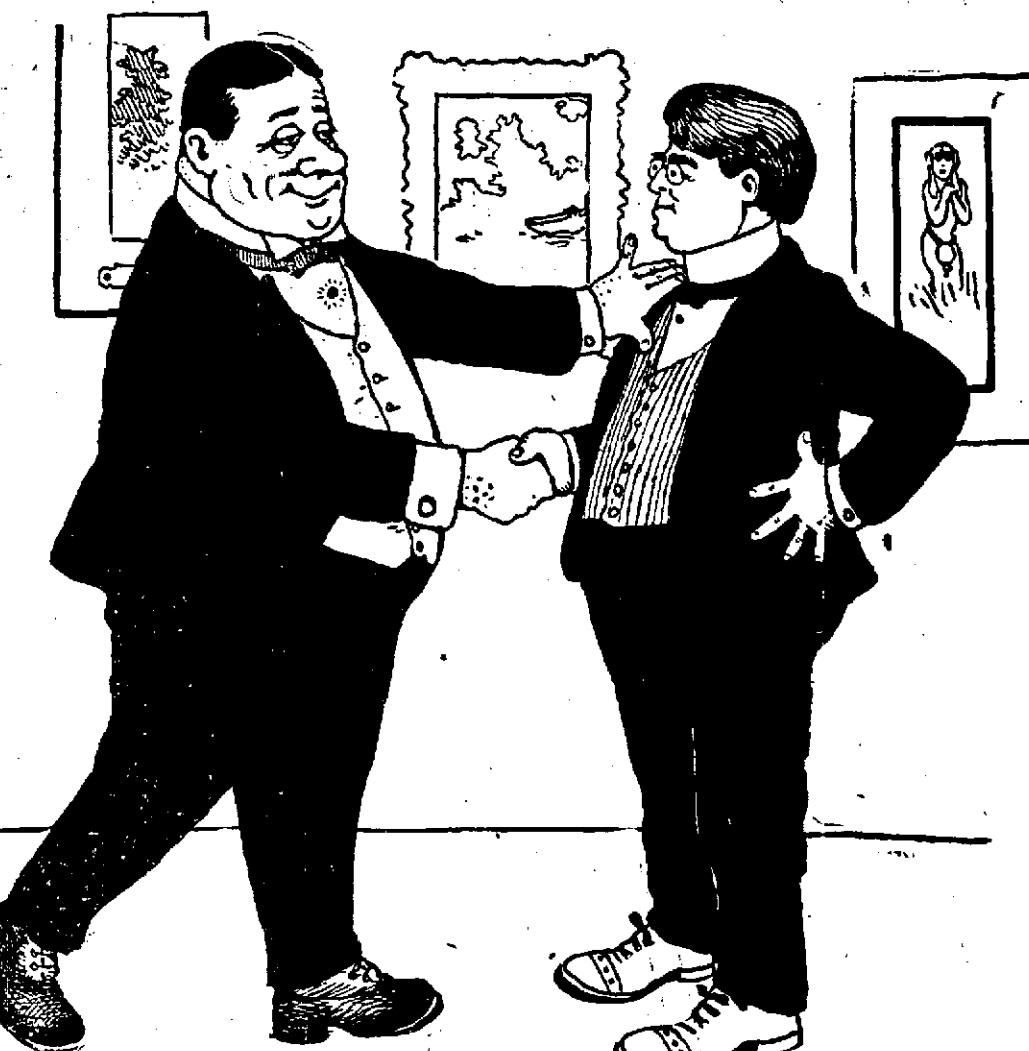

"Have you any folio of Shakespeare?"

Mr. Canfield shook his head. "No, I have not," he answered, "and I almost wish I hadn't started collecting the first editions I have. It is costly, a very costly fad."

"I saw Bucklin once looking at them with an eager eye, and I warned him, 'Dave,' I said, 'be warned in time, never start in collecting first editions. It is a costly craving that grows and grows and is never satisfied.'

"The more of them you get the more you want. There are many you want you can't get. And it is the desire of getting more that is not satisfied at all in the joy of having what you have that makes it a terrible mania."

"Collecting Chippendale is far more satisfying. You get Chippendale and you can use it. It shows for itself. You enjoy what you have. You will get more examples of it if you can, if "That's the reason," said Mr. Canfield, emphatically, "and that's the reason I'd like you to see my Chippendale furniture."

"How about Sheraton?" we asked.

utes I shall be due at a reception uptown. But what is it you wish me to tell you?"

"Oh!—a sample of the ideas I propose to hand them out in my formal speech, eh? Well, I want to get after those club ladies and society people and picture to them the real stage life as it is, so that they'll say, as they did when I spoke in Chicago, 'Why, after all, the actress is only just a woman, like the rest of us!' They have no idea of our domestic side.

"You see, it's necessary to explain that almost incomprehensible fact to the average non-professional person in this country. In Europe artists are honored and loved for what they have done as artists, and they are invited into homes and knighted and classed with the distinguished members of other states, dignified and learned professions.

"Here there is very little social recognition of the actress. And why? Not because they don't respect her, but because they don't know her. It never occurs to most people that her woman's nature craves something sympathetic. The last time I was in Chicago a delegation of clergymen suppers we read about in fiction! Here is my own actual living schedule every week day of the past nine months:

"Called at 8 a. m., and must be up and dressed before 9 or sacrifice my breakfast. Rehearsal at the theater until 1 p. m., matinee performance beginning at 2. From 5 until 7 home for dinner, and you can figure for yourself how much time that allows for receiving callers, even if you are willing to give up your bath and a half hour's beauty sleep. Then there is the evening performance, and home at midnight to study for two or three hours on the new part—for, you know, I have had to get up a new one each week, and that means memorizing sometimes as many as 125 'sides' or type-written pages."

"Gee whiz!" gasped the interviewer. "Oh, it's nothing out of the common," said Miss Bingham, smiling cheerfully, "only I feel as if I'd like to make the world better acquainted with such cold facts when I have the privilege of speaking for my profession."

"And I must say, they listen to me sympathetically. The last time I was in Chicago a delegation of clergymen did me the honor of requesting an informal address. I just felt in the mood, and I guess I talked to those ministers as they never heard a woman talk before or since."

"Why are you so stand-offish toward our profession?" I asked them. "Are you aware that nine out of ten actors and actresses are Christians? We preach, in our way, as earnestly as you do, and we reach large classes of people whom you never can reach. You say we depict bad characters and are in touch with the sinful and debased conditions of life. Well, in our plays we have to take life as it is and show to the weak and erring what the wages of sin really are, and why some deserve them."

"You good ministers," I said, "are saved already and can afford to occupy yourselves with the pure and the beautiful. Why don't you come to the theater once in a while and get acquainted, and invite us to your churches? We have made the first advance in our splendid Actors' Church Alliance."

"A sentiment which does not, of course, apply to the life of the average actress!"

"No, indeed!" cried Amelia Bingham warmly. "That's what I am going to St. Paul to tell them. Why, there is compensation to an actress in the very thought of what she means to the

in the theater, stimulating as that is in its way.

"But they don't realize how sweet it is to a poor, starved actress to get away from there, if only for an hour, and breathe the same atmosphere as those more fortunate of her sex who have homes and firesides and children, and all that sort of thing—and no temptations to speak of, either, as compared with ours."

"Not that I am trying to make any excuses, for we don't need them. There is, the average human percentage of error among our player people, of course—but nothing like the proportion generally attributed to us on account of our publicity.

"You can't name any other class of women who have so little of what makes life really worth while as we have. Living in hotels, on railway trains, and in dingy dressing-rooms, with no time for shopping, no privacy to dress except for our parts, no privacy, compelled to play whether we feel fit or not—why, we can't even have our own moods and tempers!"
